Continental Oil Leaders Confer

Colorful Texas Ranger Joe Bridge (left) of Falfurrias, and Ranger Tully Seay (second from right) of Carrizo Springs visit Continental Oil Company test-run headquarters at Laredo, Texas, to learn from Wade Johnson (second from left), and Frank Sues (far right) "what's going on." The two company technicians explain to the Rangers that six test cars of the company are being driven 800 miles per day at speeds averaging 60 miles per hour over a period of 70 days, to test the wear-prevention qualities of a new super motor oil developed by the company. At the end of the test run, which put more than 50,000 miles on each car—equal to five years' mileage for the average family car—the motors were torn down and checked for wear, which proved to be less than one one-thousandth of an inch on cylinders and crankshafts. As the Rangers learned at the conclusion of the test, wear had been so negligible that factory machining marks were still visible on piston rings.

Continental New Oil Is Revealed

Continental Oil Company today revealed development of a new motor oil—the result of eight years' laboratory research, two winters of testing in Montana and Colorado, and a 50,000-mile road test in temperatures ranging up to 110 degrees, according to Jim Bridgewater, local agent for Continental.

The new oil, according to Jim Bridgewater, marks another advance in methods pioneered and developed by Continental to use additives in mineral oils to decrease wear and assure longer life for engines.

The spectacular road test made on the Mexican border in the summer of 1949 showed the oil "practically stops wear before it starts," Jim Bridgewater reported.

In fact, in measurements with highly sensitive instruments wear averaged less than one one-thousandth of an inch on cylinders and crankshafts. Original factory machining marks were still visible on piston rings," Jim Bridgewater said.

In the 70-day road test, six cars and four trucks piled up a combined half-million miles at an average speed of 60 miles an hour by cars and 50 by the trucks. Traveling 800 miles a day, six days a week, each car rolled up a minimum of 50,000 miles in the test. This distance equals five years' mileage for the average family car, according to Jim Bridgewater.

The severe road test was certified by Norman Penfold of the Southwest Research Institute. Penfold is acknowledged as an outstanding independent authority on oil testing.

The oil, say company technicians, carries a new detergent, or cleaning agent, which keeps road-dirt and other contaminants in suspension, rather than allowing them to build up on motor surfaces or cause rings to stick.

Gasoline mileage for the last 5,000 miles was as good as for the first 5,000—actually there was an average difference for the fleet of only 4-100 of a mile per gallon, technicians conducting the test reported.
