

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER

Amos the Prophet and His People
Lesson for April 16: Amos 7:7-15;
8:1-3

Memory Selection: Amos 5: 6

AMOS, a native of Tekoa, near the northern boundary of Judah, who made a living by selling wool and figs, left his humble surroundings about 775 B.C. and appeared at Bethel, in Israel, to rebuke the king and his people for their wickedness.

About 150 years had passed since the division of the nation. Jeroboam, the first king of Israel, fearing the loyalty of the people to the new government might be weakened if they came in contact with the people of Judah several times a year in going to Jerusalem for the feasts, as they were commanded to do by the law of Moses, set up shrines at Dan and Bethel, with a degraded worship of Jehovah, and also allowed the worship of Baal.

Under Jeroboam II the influence of impure religion had entirely corrupted the nation. The masses were poor and oppressed by the few who had all the wealth of the country.

Under the figure of the plumb line and the basket of summer fruit, Amos predicted that Jehovah would soon leave the nation to its fate. About a generation afterward the terrible Assyrians despoiled Israel, and the kingdom and its 10 tribes passed from history.

The lessons of Amos are quite modern, we find, and as applicable to present conditions as they were to those in Israel 2600 years ago.

"Doctrine of Atonement" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, April 16, 1950.

The Golden Text is: "If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." (1 John 2:1).

Other Bible citations include: "And I looked, and lo, a Lamb stood on the mount Zion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand having his Father's name written in their foreheads." And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God." (Rev. 14: 1, 5).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Glory be to God, and peace to the struggling hearts! Christ hath rolled away the stone from the door of human hope and faith, and through the revelation and demonstration of life in God, hath elevated them to possible at-one-ment with the Spiritual idea of man and his divine Principle, Love."
