installed for use in case of dinners or banquets.
In case it was desired during banquets a table on the stage would accommodate thirty-five.
The roof of the structure would be supported by steel trusses, thirty-five feet high in the center and lowered to twenty at the sides.
President C. C. Girardot stated the Chamber of Commerce desired to secure the needed information for the public, something definite to work on, that could be presented to the residents of the community, who were the final judges of the matter.
It was decided that later a general public meeting would be called where the matter could be presented to the public and it was hoped a large audience would be present to more fully understand the proposed building.
The present committee will be continued while the preliminary facts are gathered for presentation.

Former Local Lady In Hospital Work

The Chicago Sun-Times in writing of the great work of the members of the nursing profession, especially of the board of the St. Luke's hospital in that city, tells of the work of Miss Harriett Fulmer, a resident at one time of Plattsmouth, where she will be recalled by the older residents.
Miss Fulmer was a teacher in the local schools before entering the nursing profession, later going to Chicago where she has won a great deal of fame for her work. The article follows:
Not all the women who have contributed luster to the great name of St. Luke's Hospital are members of that effete and efficient group known as the women's board.

The others, whose names and pictures are undoubtedly much less familiar to you, are those gallant women in white who, for as long as many Chicagoans can remember, have been writing the nursing books rather than the society columns.
Getting their costumes from uniform houses rather than from the 28 Shop, this second group are members of the St. Luke's Hospital School of Nursing Alumnae Association and Nursing Council who will celebrate the 65th anniversary of its founding Friday and Saturday.

Topping the list of celebrators of course, is Harriet E. Fulmer, Chicago's famous "statesman nurse." A member of its ninth graduation class, she not only organized its alumnae association and served as its president for 17 years, but founded the Cook County Rural Nursing Service (since 1940 the Cook County Public Health Unit of the Department of Public Welfare). And during the 12 years she was director of the present Chicago Visiting Nurses Association, she built it from a wobbly organization with a staff of nine nurses into an ultra-efficient nursing service with a staff of 90.
But among the other St. Luke's old-timers who have left their impress outside as well as inside that hospital are the former Annie E. Nourse of the class of 1890 (later Mrs. Lester E. Frankenthal) and Adda Eldredge of the class of 1899. Before becoming the wife of the distinguished Chicago surgeon the then Miss Nourse founded the Michael Reese Hospital School of Nursing.

THIS CITY IS ONE GREAT SCHOOL

JUST 37 MILES west of Chicago lies one of the most unique cities in the world—Mooseheart III. Maintained by the Loyal Order of Moose, Mooseheart is a "child city" for sons and daughters of deceased Moose members. All children are given a high school education and taught a vocational trade. Since its founding in 1913, some 5,000 boys and girls have been cared for at Mooseheart. Present students come from 31 of the 48 states. There are now nearly a thousand young citizens in residence there.

"Mooseheart is run by people who do not like institutions," says Malcolm B. Giles, director general of the order. "We do everything that devotion and ingenuity can suggest to make it as little like an institution and as much like home as possible."

For instance, the children do not live in great bleak dormitories nor eat in large mess halls. There are many small dwellings, each of which has a pleasant living room for games and reading, a dining room in which boys or girls of the same relative age and size eat as do normal families, and bedrooms which have space for personal belongings.

Mooseheart is a community without voters, taxes, morticians, jails, or strikes. It has its own postoffice, heating plant, elementary school, high school, hospital, and laundry. Its 800-acre farm produces 60 per cent of its food. A modern dairy and prize herd produce a quart of milk daily for each resident. Mooseheart has an abattoir, an orchard, cannery, greenhouse, gas station, and its own fire department.

Furniture in the Pennsylvania "baby village" is dollhouse size. Boys have their own barber shops, girls their own beauty salons. They have a student bank which welcomes checks for as little as one penny.

Boys and girls each have their own department store where clothes are "purchased" with a requisition slip only. The children select their own clothes.

Like parents, Mooseheart is eager to develop each child's every faculty. A child may learn to play any musical instrument, or receive voice instruction. There are religious services and instruction for all denominations. Each child is reared in the faith that prevailed in his family home. A unique $1,500,000 church, called the House of God, devoted to tolerance and to the spiritual and moral needs of children of some 25 religious denominations represented at Mooseheart will be dedicated next August 29.

A year ago its football teams played and won 29 games—its total schedule for the year. The pet peeve of the children is that they do not like to be called orphans. Many of them have at least one parent living. In many cases, the mother lives and works at Mooseheart.

This unique city has just about every after-school joy known to youth. There are movies, roller and ice skating, dances, a swimming pool, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, including Cubs and Brownies. There are several bands and orchestras, the children stage many plays throughout the year, there is boating on a picturesque lake. There is a large memorial stadium. Sports range from ping-pong to hockey.

Some $35,000,000 has been poured into Mooseheart, the only large town created for children only. Here is heart-warming proof in our cynical world, of the inherent goodness of man.
