"I REMEMBER" BY THE OLD TIMERS

FROM THE OLD TIMER OF Frankfort, Ky.: "I remember when canning was a long, hot job for the women folks. Foods were scalded in a wash boiler, but you scalded yourself, too. There was always that uncertainty about food-keeping. How about your memories of days gone by, old-timers? I'd like to have some for this column. Write me in care of Box 340, Frankfort, Ky."

From Sara Reed Dole of Chicago: "I remember the winters when I was a small girl living in a small town in Kankakee county, Illinois, and the thrill of opening the pit and taking out apples, turnips, potatoes and cabbage for our winter meals. There were no basements in those days, and no deep freezers, either. Many a time farmers had to go through fields to town because all the roads were blocked by high snow banks. The snow was often so hard-crusted that we could walk right on top of it. Sometimes we'd sink in up to our waists. We had to walk two miles to school."

From J. F. Bauman of Rockport, Ind.: "I remember when church was over, we would step up to a girl and say, 'Max, I see you home tonight?' And we didn't always get an affirmative answer. How different it is nowadays!"

From Mrs. Nettie I. Vanderwerker of Napoleon, Mich.: "I remember sleeping in a trundle bed. It was a low contraption on casters and was rolled under the regular bed for the daytime and rolled out at night."
