Plattsmouth Bank Unveiled Friday

(Continued from Page One) guest book, presenting the callers with orchids for the ladies, automatic pencils for the men visitors. Arthur Warga had charge of the new section of the bank, the bookkeeping room, safe deposit vault with individual recesses and desks for those wishing to examine their holdings free from interference. Mrs. Carl Schneider, Mrs. Frank A. Cloutier and Mrs. Orville Nielsen assisted in showing the visitors through the bank. The ladies also served punch in the directors room to members of the groups of several hundred that visited the bank during the afternoon and evening.

The bank was a glow of color and floral beauty, large bouquets from banking associates and Plattsmouth business establishments and individuals filling the lobby and various banking rooms. Banks that remembered the Plattsmouth State included the Livestock National Bank of Omaha, First National Bank and First Trust Co., National Bank of Commerce of Lincoln, First National Bank, Omaha National Bank, U. S. National Bank, Stockyards National Bank of Omaha, Farmers State Bank of Avoca, Bank of Nebraska, American Exchange Bank of Elmwood, Corn-growers State Bank of Murdock, Malvern Trust and Savings Bank, Malvern Iowa.

Among the array of out of town bankers here and personal friends of the officers of Plattsmouth State were: George Holmes of the First National, Lincoln, Samuel Waugh, native Plattsmouth resident of the First Trust Co., of Lincoln, Carl Ganz, former Alvo banker, now with the National Bank of Commerce of Lincoln, John Stocker of the Nebraska City National Bank, Adolph Hallas, former Plattsmouth man now with the Stockyards National of Omaha.

One must see the modernized bank to fully realize the extent of the changes, the beauty that has been made a part of the banking house interior. The walls and ceiling are done in pastel shades of green, rose and ivory. Ceilings have been dropped several feet with a new lighting system installed casting the soft rays in every part of the bank without glare or eye strain.

At the front as one enters the bank a fine office and consulting room has been arranged where business can be discussed by officers and clients in comfort and seclusion. This is a new feature of the bank. Throughout walnut wood has been used in new modernized desks, the dark walnut wood is also used in fittings of marble banking counters.

The new portion arranged in the north part of the adjacent building, is perhaps the most important change for employees. Here a fine well lighted and beautifully decorated room has been arranged where are located the electric bookkeeping machines. Off this room is the new vault for safety deposit boxes with desks for patrons.

Board of directors room also used as a consulting room, has felt the touch of the modernizing program. New walnut table and chairs have replaced the old furniture. It is a room that radiates comfort and efficiency.

The bank is truly one of which officers can be proud. Few banks have as fine an arrangement.
