After several days in Wisconsin we traveled straight south to Bloomington, Illinois, in the state of Illinois where we saw peach orchards, the harvest on in full swing. Further south in Illinois we saw many tobacco and cotton fields. We crossed the Mississippi river into Kentucky. At the point where the Mississippi Ohio river meet, we stopped and visited the ancient buried city of prehistoric men and at Wickliff, western Kentucky, near Cairo, Illinois, just across the Ohio river bridge.

"We visited at Jackson, Tennessee which is a beautiful city, where we saw the old plantation, passing many lumber camps in Mississippi where they were sawing lumber and the sawdust was in huge piles like great straw stacks. Then we visited the turpentine camps where the sap being gathered and distilled into turpentine. In Alabama we saw more lumber camps and pulp wood camps where smaller trees were being converted into pulp for paper making.

"We visited at Mobile, Alabama, where we visited many mansions which were really beautiful, and then onto the Gulf coast where we saw the Gulf of Mexico which was at a very rough stage, waves were coming in that were fifteen feet high, sometimes higher. The natives all had a look of concern, they were expecting a hurricane, that seemed slow in coming.

"We visited old Fort Morgan, which is still in a good state of preservation, saw the underground dungeons where war prisoners were kept during the American-English war. There were furnaces where they heated cannon balls before firing on the English war ships. It sank the battleship "Hermes". This hot shot furnace rests in the middle of the original fort, built by the Spanish in the middle of the 16th century, with ten gun mounds it is the largest and oldest fort in America.

"We visited Pensacola, Florida where we found the business houses and homes being boarded up, and were unable to buy any trinkets of the town. Everyone was expecting disaster. We left the Gulf shores late in the afternoon to arrive at Atmore, Alabama, where the hurricane struck at 2 a. m. and lasted for two hours. It was a great wind storm of cyclonic proportions. It snapped large trees in two, up-rooting other trees and tearing roofs off houses. We still saw ravages of the storm at Montgomery, Alabama and at Columbus, Mississippi. We made an overnight visit at Greenwood, Mississippi. The next day we reached the Ozark mountains in Arkansas, making an overnight stop at Harrisonville. The

Tomans Return From Outing In Wisconsin

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Toman and daughter, Dorothea, have returned from an extended vacation trip including a visit at the twin cities, St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minnesota. From the twin cities they drove to Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, from there going to Merrill, Wisconsin, where they visited with relatives, enjoyed fishing on Long Lake and the wonderful boat riding, a picnic party at one of the lovely cabins on the lake. Writing they state "We visited the beautiful Kraftwood Gardens owned by the Kraft cheese company, saw the many beautiful flowers, wished at the wishing well, sat on the worry stone that is supposed to drive away all worries. We enjoyed a visit at the museum, built of hard limestone, where the Finns who followed the lines of building of their native land, inspecting the many historical things, native wild life, cages of colorful birds and animals, Indian artifacts from the stone age and the many things of interest. Outside of the door of the museum was "The Old Maid's Hairpin Stone" and the "Mercy Seal" from where we could see the bird sanctuary. We then visited "Cannibal Island", made of all kinds of shells. Before we left the Kraft Gardens we saw the tallest totem pole in the United States, 59 feet high and hewed out of a single cedar tree with a city of many beautiful homes.

"We came on home through Iowa after crossing the Missouri four times and the Mississippi four times, and were glad to be back home. We enjoyed our trip very much but we were glad to be home and our home state as usual, looked the best.
