Veatch said this snow measuring idea has been used extensively for about 10 years. The old method was to send hardy mountaineers along the Cascades, hauling all their equipment on their backs, and sometimes taking days to get to a marked course. It takes the helicopter a few minutes to get to the same course from a mountain base camp.

Sending a crew into the mounains in mid-winter is hard on the men and "extremely hazardous." Veatch said. Several have been seriously injured or cut off from shelter for several
