Poisonous Weed Spreading East

Governmental action is quite probable to check the spread of the poisonous weed, halogeton, which has recently become firmly entrenched in six Western states, Senator Hugh Butler predicted today.

The new weed which first secured a foothold in this country in 1935 in Nevada brings sudden death to sheep and cattle feeding on it in late fall and winter when other forage is not available. From a half pound to a pound and a half of the weed, dry weight, will kill a sheep. During the past 15 years, Senator Butler said, it has spread as far East as Wyoming, and is still increasing.
