COIL CONSERVATION MAY SAVE U.S. J "American civilization will reach a disastrous turning-point within twenty years." declares Dr. Wendell H. Camp, President of the American Horticultural Council. He says that will happen unless "immediate and heroic measures are taken to save our remaining crop land and thus guarantee a continuing food supply for our growing population.

Calling attention to the loss of 100,-000,000 acres to erosion and misuse, the doctor says that another 100,000,000 acres of the 560,000,000 acres acquired by our early settlers will be in the discard by 1960. In the meantime, the population is rising at the rate of 2,200,000 a year.

Nutritionists estimate that it takes two and a half acres of crop land to provide a properly balanced diet for a single person and, therefore, the doctor says that the United States will arrive at a critical point in the next fifteen or twenty years. The world at large, of course, is in a worse condition than the United States but this is no consolation for the problem that we face.

The average American, including those who live in the rural sections, rarely stops to realize that the civilization of the world depends upon the top six inches of soil that enable mankind to raise crops. To stand idly by while this precious land is washed into the rivers and ocean by our disregarded rainfalls is carelessness of the worst type. Because of the latent danger, the Government has very wisely taken steps to encourage landowners to practice soil conservation and intelligent agriculturalists are more interested than ever in saving their soil.

THREE BILLION DOLLARS SURPLUS The idea that present inflationary trends are due to deficit financing on the part of the government must be abandoned in the light of the statement that the federal treasury will show a three billion dollar surplus for the fiscal year ending June 30th.

This is due, in the words of John M. Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury, to the increased collection of taxes, largely income and corporation levies, and a slower tempo of spending for defense. Moreover, Mr. Snyder thinks that, if Congress provides another ten billion dollar tax-bite there will be a surplus for the 1952 fiscal year which ends on June 30th, 1952.

"DOWN WITH THE U.S. An educational project with Chile, under the Point Four Assistance Program, has been terminated at the request of the Chilean Government but there will remain intact a health and sanitation program, one for agriculture and another for lowcost housing projects.

The agreement, signed in January, provided for United States assistance in the purchase of equipment and professional aid for the modernization of educational methods in Chile. Almost as soon as news of the agreement got around, there was a bitter campaign of opposition.

The hostility was brought to a head when university students paraded the streets, approaching the U.S. Embassy residence with shouts of "Down with the United States!" Thereupon, Claude G. Bowers, our Ambassador, reminded the government that the agreement resulted from a Chilean request but that, since it must be based on "good faith with popular support," which seemed to be lacking in view of the growing violence of the opposition campaign, it should be terminated.
