DALE CARNEGIE

AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING"

"You Are An Individual"

JOHN E. FITSON, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, says until he had grown to manhood he had hated himself most of the time. He hated himself because he couldn't do the things other people could do; he hated himself because he was so bashful; he hated himself because he was often made a fool of himself. He went through the war not caring whether he lived or died. He would volunteer for dangerous missions just to see if he could take it. He wanted to prove to himself that he was not a coward.

Carnegie

He was still bitter after he got out of the army. He got a job, worked three days and quit. He had left school at the end of the eighth grade. But now he decided to go to the veterans' school, and this was the first time he had ever felt the stirring of ambition. But he worked so hard that he became ill. Now he had something to worry about: stomach ulcers. Next his eyes became infected, and a carbuncle developed. Soon he was in the hospital.

Lying in the hospital, he read a great deal. He came across the following in a book that was handed him:

"You are an individual; there is no one like you; there never has been; and there never will be anyone like you."

Now he began to think. He suddenly realized that he didn't need to be like all those people he had resented. He was different and he would make the most of his differences. He began to like himself better; he began liking other people. Gradually he became happier. As he became happier, his physical self improved, and he says from that time on he didn't worry. He is happier now than he ever thought it possible for him to be.
