country reached its highest peak, 32,530,-000 individuals.

The figure for 1950, recently announced by the Census Bureau, is 24,335,000 which is the lowest since the Government began keeping figures on farm population in 1910.

Between these two years, there has not been a steady decline, however. The previous low figure was 24,342,000 in April, 1945, but there was an upsurge after that, which pushed the farm population to 24,147,000 in 1947.

The people of the nation should not overlook the dwindling farm population. It is true that mechanical progress in farm machinery, together with improved methods of agriculture, now enables the present farm population to produce more abundantly than the larger number on the farms in previous years. Nevertheless life on the farm must be made profitable and attractive enough to retain a sufficient number of farmers to take care of the basic needs of the country's population.

IKE SELLING BROOKLYN BRIDGE

L Something new in "influence peddling" is reported from Washington, where a Senate committee is investigating an alleged swindle of hundreds of thousands of dollars, obtained from persons who thought they could get help in obtaining leases on major government buildings in the capital.

The story that the fast-talking swindler developed was that the Government would abandon its buildings and go underground to escape the danger of an atomic bomb. The money was paid to get his "influence" in obtaining leases on the governmental buildings when they were abandoned.

This is an astonishing story, depicting not only the crooked shrewdness of the manipulator but also the almost unbelievable gullibility of those who are willing to spend some money to get something at a bargain rate. Of course, the swindler could not have succeeded in his promotional stunt if there had been no individuals ready to pay him for an "inside position" in connection with leasing the Government buildings.

Maybe, western civilization is all bad and should be replaced with the culture of India, China, Africa or Russia.

DUMPS WATER TO MAKE CROPS

"The longest mass movement of water ever attempted by man" will get underway in California in August, when the first phase of the $600,000,000 Central Valley project begins operation.

With $400,000,000 worth of big dams, power plants, pumps, canals and transmission lines, the project undertakes to transport surplus water from the Sacramento Valley hundreds of miles southward to irrigate the semi-arid San Joaquin area. The project was first envisioned by the state but was subsequently taken over and expanded by the Federal Government. Bureau of Reclamation Officials gave the following examples of what has happened in some areas already under irrigation:

(1) A 160-acre farm, netting $331 from pasturage two years ago, will this year net close to $20,000 on a cotton crop, and

(2) A 400-acre farm, netting $1,500 from barley and pasturage in a dry farming condition, has an expected profit of $77,400 from cotton this year.

The Central Valley is about 500 miles long, with the Sacramento River to the North and the San Joaquin to the South, roughly forming its boundaries. Surplus water from the Sacramento will be transported hundreds of miles to help irrigate the southern part of the area. * * *

The Familiar Isn't Frightening

THEN DUDLEY HALL, Skaneateles, N. Y., was in high school he made a record that most people would think enviable. In his second year he was on the football team and was president of his class. His junior year found him captain of the football team, on the basketball team, and again class president. The last year, he was captain of both the football and the basketball teams, played on the baseball team, and still class

Then he enrolled in a large eastern university. In his freshman year, he was captain of the football team and vice-president of his class. In his junior year, he was still with the football team and received an all-eastern mention. The year he graduated he had just gone through a thrilling period: on the football team, all-American mention, permanent second marshall of his class.

With such a record of outward accomplishment, wouldn't you think he would have enjoyed some feeling of success? Well, he didn't. More than that, he wasn't even happy. Why? He was filled with fear! He was terrified at the thought of going out into the world and facing people near at hand whom he had never before seen. Performing before 80,000 spectators at a game didn't feaze him in the least. But the very suggestion of appearing before small groups of people, even of talking to some unknown man who might not even judge him favorably, brought soul-wrenching

Then all or a sudden he realized that he wasn't afraid of that with which he was familiar. He realized that he had to become familiar with what he wanted to conquer. So he got a job of selling from door to door. The first day was an agonizing experience, but after a few weeks he was thrilled at seeing how many of those who opened their doors could be influenced by his persuasions to "come across."

Grain Fumigation May Be Required Entomologists Say

Farmers with small grain in storage may find it necessary to fumigate their grain this year to stop deterioration of it by insects.

They recommend fumigating the grain about six weeks after on a charge of intoxication. it is stored if the farmer suspects weevils in the bin. They suggest inspecting grain frequently. They warn that loss Long. Jackson and Schlieske in storage from insects can be greater than in the field.

They say ideal fumigation conditions are tight bins and high grain temperatures. The entomologists advise making the bin as airtight as possible for Fumigants are used because
