I his Petty Pace By Brown Lee Yates

WE'RE TERRIBLY embarrasenjoyed by all. The next meeting will be a Christmas party at the cads in the lovelorn letters. Our wife, reading Dorothy Dix, becomes incensed at some ne'er-dowell described by an overwrought Nellie. Then she looks at us, thinks the shoe fits, and bashes us over the head with it.

Comparison of us to some unregenerate who has done in poor Nell makes our gizzard writhe. We're a good hubby. We're provident-rotate the feeding days of the kids fairly and even have their names on the waiting list of one of the better poor houses. We're so kind the family doesn't quail whewe shout. "Who the devil tore the sports page!"

We're angry because our likeness to the rake isn't co-incidental. Love lorn columns are a plot to keep man in perpetual atonement for suspected sins, and women readers encourage the columnists to portray husbands in the guise of devilto keep a crimp in hubby's hale The columnists incorporate adul tery and sadism in a villianous boob whose character they ther weaken with addition of some of our minor vices.

It's pretty insidious how Doroth-Dix's scoundrels get us in the soup We're at breakfast with our wife eading the paper and eating frank furters, (who can afford bacon?) Wile read in Dorothy Dix how poor Nell is twittered over a tramp who cheats his grandmother out of her old age pension at whist and has designs upon Mary Worth. Under his kisses Nell is as fluid as scalded molasses, and has the self-control of a squashed egg, so she lets him persuade her to jilt her well-heeled boy friend to marry the tramp who's so lazy he can provide her nothing to eat but frank-

Miss Dix deprecates the match and so do we on account of the assumption our wife will draw from the frankfurters about the tramp's character and ours. Already ideas begin to couple and uncouple in Wifey's head with jerks like railroad cars when the train is being formed. Soon her train of thought is joined into a conclusion. She looks at the franks with distaste and regards us with

Need For School Construction Is Told By Butler

Senator Hugh Butler (R.-Nebr.) in a letter released to-day, told Manly Fleischmann, Administrator of the Defense Production Administration Production Prod did not fully grasp the urgency of the need for additional school construction, in view of Fleischmann's recent sharp cutback in the quantity of steel allotted for that purpose. The full text of Senator Butler's letter is as follows: Quote your recent letter in reply to my series of letters running ban' as far as September 6, in with I have protested agains the sharp restriction on school construction during the coming months on the basis of current steel allotments. I appreciate your concern about the school situation, but am afraid you may not have fully grasped the urgency of this problem. By next September, school enready over-loaded, unless school transport, U. S. S. It is my understanding that you are now reviewing the steel requirement for schools in accordance with the request of the Senate, as embodied in a Senate Resolution passed in the last few days of the session. I would suggest that as an absolute minimum, enough school construction be permitted at least to take care of the increased enrollment of 1,700,000 children who must enter the schools in less than a year. Such a policy would do nothing to relieve the backlog, but might at least make the situation bearable for the time being.

To repeat a statement contained in one of my previous letters to you, I refuse to believe we are in such a crisis that we cannot educate the children properly.

End quote.
