Wosters Take Over Leadership In Bowling Loop

Wosters Shoe Store claimed undisputed possession of first place in the Plattsmouth Bowling League following last week's games. The Shoe Salesmen with a 14-7 record held a one-game margin over Jack and Elmers.

Utilizing a near 100-pin handicap, the Shoe Salesmen halted Joe's New-Way. The Grocers dropped the series 3-0, losing one game by only three pins.

Meanwhile Jack & Elmer took two from the Bowling Alleys with a 2136 series. They lost the third game by 4 pins.

In other games last week, the Plattsmouth Paint Store won three from Myers Grocery to move up into a third place tie. It ended a six-game winning streak for the Grocers. By winning two games, Harry's Bar also remained in a third-place tie. They edged the Eagles.

The Plattsmouth Journal showed the V. F. W. farther into the cellar by winning two of the three games.

agine what would happen to us if we were so bold as to attempt such a building project. We'd be knocked lower than a sea-serpent's belly.

So often in the news dispatches we read of elderly persons wandering around the streets of a city, clad in rags, who are discovered to be owners of sizeable fortunes.

Recently in another state, a ragged, 77-year-old man, who once complained of a "bad year" because he had to spend a total of $13,350 on living expenses, died. When his will was read, it was found that he was the owner of an estate worth $103,000—all of which he left to the Salvation Army because of its kindness to him.

Similar instances crop up in the news every once in a while. Just what mental processes move such individuals to live in poverty, denying themselves even the necessities of life, remain a psychological puzzle, but after reading that the United States has a large number of these kind of people, we go out of our way to be kind to every old bum we meet—you never know when one of these birds will kick off and leave us a fortune in cigar bands.

One of the greatest improvements ever made within the confines of Plattsmouth is the new stop and go light at Sixth and Main. Nothing but compliments have been bestowed on the City Council since the new lights were placed in operation by both motorists and pedestrians. It eliminates a bottleneck at this busy intersection that has flared tempers for years. It is not only efficient, but it even looks good.

Next thing to get used to is parking meters. Frankly, we don't know how they will work out, but they're worth a try if meters are an answer to providing shoppers a place to park their car. Many communities swear by them—for a time, at least, a lot of people here will swear at them. —RRF

This fellow has better control over his wife than the average Cass county man. We can im-

While official statistics prove otherwise, men have always taken a great deal of delight in referring to the bad driving habits of womenfolk, as a whole. One man in North Dakota, we read, in planning his new home, decided to include a two-car garage. In order to assure the safe ingress and egress of his wife's car, over the door of one garage will be painted, in large letters, "His" and over the other door—which is two feet wider—will be the word "Hers."

Fixed charges of operation in most counties, towns and villages run about the same each year. Law provides that governing bodies shall have the right to submit a budget for operating expenses each year and a mill levy to provide the necessary funds. Low valuations call for high mill levies. That is the position most of the state finds itself in today. But, the tax chislers are numerous, and a good half of the property owners are carrying far more than their share of the load. Equalization of assessment values should bring about a lower mill levy, adjusted tax benefits and a better feeling when the taxpayer lays his dough on the line at the County Treasurer's office.

Plans behind the present program does not call for a reassessment of property. It is a scientific revaluation by specialists in the field. Every home, every building, will be measured, analyzed, checked and rechecked, to arrive at its true value. When completed, the survey will disclose the actual value of each property within the county. Every valuation will be compiled on the same basis, with location, age, improvements, etc., all taken into consideration. When the job is complete, every taxpayer in the county can be assured that he will be assessed on the same basis as his neighbor. Mill levies will be set only in an amount necessary to provide the funds needed to operate city, county and village governments.

Tax injustices within the towns and villages of the county are far greater than most residents realize. Tax records in the assessor's office, all open to the public if any one is interested or inquisitive enough to investigate, would shock many property owners if they learned first hand the valuation placed on the homes, public buildings, and improvements of some of their neighbors.

The County Commissioners decision to select a committee of three Cass county businessmen as advisors in planning a county-wide tax equalization program is certainly a wise move. We believe a program of this nature will not only please the majority of taxpayers in the county, but in the long run will cut the tax bill for many and at the same time increase the monies available to the county, much of which can be poured into the road and bridge fund that has suffered the past few years due to added financial burdens of a county with a fixed levy.
