

Two-Run Rally Gives Druggists Second Win

A two-run rally in the last of the fifth inning with two down enabled Cass Drug to take its second win in the Plattsmouth Midget Baseball league Wednesday afternoon. The Druggists nipped Plattsmouth State Bank 5-4.

Joe Grauf chalked up his second win of the week with a two-hit performance and came through with two hits, including the blow that brought home the winning run in the fifth. He also tripped and scored a run in the second inning.

The loss dropped the Bankers into second place in league standings. They now have a 1-1 record.

Grauf's blow in the fifth capped a see-saw battle that had seen first one team and then the other in the lead. Cass Drug scored first in the second inning with two runs on two hits and an error. Grauf's triple scored Stuart Nielsen who had single and Grauf later scored when Holoubek lived on an error. The Druggists added another run in the third for a 3-0 margin as Third Baseman B. Wilson tripled and scored on Nielsen's single.

Bob Christenham broke the game wide open for the Bankers in the fourth as he opened with a triple, scoring as Larry Walton lived on an error. Campbell's double brought Walton around to score. Campbell later scored as Butch Furse reached first and came around as Haase lived on an error.

That set the stage for Grauf's winning blow in the fifth.

A good pitchers battle, K. Dasher gave up only six hits and struck out ten batters for the losers, while Grauf chalked up his second win on a two hit job. He walked three and struck out eight.

Junior Legion Seeks 4th Win At Weeping Water

Seeking to complete the first round of district play undefeated, Plattsmouth Junior Legion baseball team will meet Weeping Water at the Indians' field Sunday afternoon.

Coach Carl Haith's Juniors have rolled over three opponents in remaining undefeated through the season's early stages. Ashland, Springfield and favored Louisville have fallen to the mighty Blue Devils. John Schuetz, Tom Conis, Larry Pierce and John Blotter have teamed to lead the team through its first three games. Schuetz has hurled the three wins, giving up an average of less than three hits and yielding only two runs per game.

Meanwhile Conis, Pierce, Blotter and Schuetz have been having success at the plate. Pierce combined with Schuetz at Springfield to lead the hitters and was also a top swatter against Ashland. Conis and Blotter led the attack against Louisville.

Weeping Water is the only team in the district league not to face the Blue Devils yet this year. The Indians dropped a 5-3 tilt to Louisville but are rated no easy team. Haith plans to experiment with Tom Conis and Jim Graves on the mound Sunday to find an assistant for Schuetz who has hurled all but a few outs of the three games. Conis, however, may miss the Sunday game.

The Weeping Water game will mark the end of the first round of play for Plattsmouth Sunday. The teams play a home and home season or eight games.

Grocers Bow In Wild Scoring Contest 14-13

Marge & Elmer's made its debut in the Midget Baseball League Thursday morning by squeezing past Soennichsen's, 14 to 13, in a five inning thriller.

Postponed from Wednesday, the game marked the first appearance of both teams in league play. The Bartenders own one loss however when they failed to appear for a game scheduled on Monday.

Allan Wiles and Larry Walton teamed in hurling the Bartenders past the Grocers. They gave up eight hits and allowed nine bases on balls, while their mates combed Winscott for seven hits and three bases on balls. Wiles struck out four Grocers while Winscott mastered five Bartenders.

At that the Bartenders had an uphill fight as the Grocers scored eight runs in the first inning and sent 12 batters to the plate. The score was 11-7 for the Grocers after two innings but one in the third and four more in the fourth sent the Bartenders into a lead. Both teams scored twice in the final inning.

Douglas Reno and Larry Jenkins starred in the batters circle. Reno had 3 for 4, including a triple, while Jenkins had two for three, including a double. Marge & Elmer also came through with one double play, first in the league.

Rhodes paced Soennichsen's with two hits in two trips, both doubles. Prohaska cracked a triple for the Grocers.

Damaged Wheat Kernels Counted Easily With Test

A quick and simple aid in determining hidden insect infestation of wheat has been developed by a U. S. Department of Agriculture entomologist.

The simple test, which reveals the percentage of insect-damaged wheat within a few minutes, was devised by Albert C. Apt of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine's Manhattan, Kans., laboratory.

The entomologist demonstrated the test before county agents, grain dealers and insect-damaged wheat within a few minutes, was devised by Albert C. Apt of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine's Manhattan, Kans., laboratory.

The demonstration also is being conducted this week at a series of district meetings for grain dealers. The meetings are being conducted by the Nebraska Feed and Grain Dealers Association in cooperation with the Nebraska Grain Sanitation committee headed by J. C. "Chet" Swinbank, extension Agronomist at the University.

In grain sanitation determinations, the number of wheat kernels with weevil holes is used by the Food and Drug Administration to indicate the amount of infestation by weevils that cannot be seen with the naked eye. Mr. Apt's method is a rapid means of collecting all of the wheat kernels that have weevil holes in them.

Entomologists urge thorough cleaning of walls and floors of empty farm bins and elevators, and then treatment with insecticides, before the new crop is put in. This kills "hold-over" weevils left behind in cracks and crevices.

The test which Mr. Apt developed works on most wheat. A 100-gram sample of wheat is placed in a flat-bottomed pan 7 inches wide and 3 inches deep. A pint of a 2 per cent solution of ferric nitrate in water is poured over the wheat. (The ferric nitrate causes the damaged kernels to float.) The contents are swirled in the pan for 30 seconds. The weevil-damaged kernels float to the surface and can be counted readily.

Before the count is made, all floating kernels are pushed down once or twice as a few light, undamaged kernels may float at first because of clinging air bubbles. Piece of charcoal and shrivelled kernels may float, too, but they can be separated easily. The floating, insect-damaged kernels are lifted out of the pan onto a piece of blotting paper, where they can be counted without delay. Since warehousemen sometimes reject farm-stored grain that obviously is in bad condition, the farmer may, if he wishes, use this test on his grain beforehand to determine the per cent of infestation.

Besides the saving in time, this method costs little. A gallon of the solution costs less than 50 cents. The liquid may be strained through a piece of cheese cloth and used repeatedly.

Races Coming

torical Society's collection was made in the late seventies, using hair from various members of the family, including ten children. The wreath was a dark border, the hair for which was provided by the family's favorite horse.

Buttons, feathers, wool and seeds also were frequently used to make wreaths. All were very complicated, and one purpose served by the wreaths—usually made by young ladies—was to impress the young beau or prospective suitor. The David D. Whitney Collection in the museum includes many objects of this sort. Particularly noteworthy is a many-colored, highly-elaborate seed wreath made in 1865.

Another similar type of framed decoration was known as pictorial embroidery. This was a combination of embroidery and painting and was taught young ladies in finishing school as an indispensable part of their education.

Keepsakes and heirlooms frequently were framed and hung on the parlor wall. Baby photos were particular favorites.

Though these objects would hardly fit in today's ranch-style home, they seemed most appropriate to the Victorian household on the walls of her crowded and heavily-decorated parlor. In the museum today, they are somewhat poignant reminders of a by-gone era.
