It Happened In NEBRASKA...

No "Wild West" movie ever showed more action than the early railroads trying to cross Nebraska. In 1866, with the railroad already 270 miles west of Omaha, Chief Roman Nose warned the white man to go no farther. When the railroad continued, Indian bands attacked many a train—derailing some, and killing hundreds of workers. But the Iron Horse marched on.

Eisenhower Urges Nation Support March of Dimes

President-elect Eisenhower meets 1953 March of Dimes Poster Girls Pamela (left) and Patricia O'Neil, of Raleigh, N. C.

NEW YORK CITY—President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower called on the American public to support the 1953 March of Dimes being conducted throughout the nation during all of January.

He joined in the annual appeal after meeting the two Raleigh, N.C., sisters who are pictured on the 1953 March of Dimes poster.

They are Patricia, 6, and five-year-old Pamela O'Neil, both of whom were stricken with polio but now are recovered completely.

"It's hard to believe that these are the same little girls whose pictures are on the March of Dimes poster," he noted. "Now they're completely recovered from polio, thanks to the generosity of the American people."

He urged all Americans "to help the other like them by joining the March of Dimes."

Later, he joined the poster girls in making a short film which is being shown by television stations throughout the nation.

This year's March of Dimes follows the all-time record polio epidemic of 1952 in which more than 85,000 were stricken. At the beginning of 1953, there were 58,000 polio victims of former years still undergoing treatment, with financial help from local March of Dimes chapters.

(Continued From Page Four) for taxing motor vehicles. Most likely solution will be to retain the present formula but to collect the tax at the same time the motorist obtains his license.

DIVERSION

One of the most heated battles is expected to be waged over the question of water diversion.

Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings has said he doesn't want to start a Pier 6 brawl with his proposal that the state law prohibiting the diversion of water from one valley to another be repealed but young Sen. Joe Martin of Grand Island says he's prepared to fight diversion every step of the way.

Last-minute attempts are underway to iron out the differences between residents of the Tri-County area south of the Platte and those of the Mid-State area in Hall, Buffalo and Merrick counties in order to avoid the classic struggle which marked the 1947 session.

MISCELLANY

These are some of the big problems, but by no means all. There is likely to be some extensive debate over the appropriations bill, the prime reason, after all, for a legislative session.

School land problems will come in for a big share of the discussions. Freshman Sen. Monroe Bixler of Harris will offer a bill to keep the income from school lands in the counties where the lands are located. A Legislative Council committee headed by Sen. Robert McNutt of Lincoln, has several suggestions for strengthening the operation of the Board of Educational Lands and Funds.

Gov. Crosby will propose a series of bills to reorganize and streamline state government.

In addition, the legislators will find themselves squeezed between demands for economy on one hand and demands for new governmental services on the other; and sometimes the same persons will be pressing from both sides.

And finally, this new 1953

legislature will have to concern itself with such important matters of state as whether to accept a 25-room Southeast Lincoln home as a gift for a governor's mansion, whether to appropriate money so the murals may be placed in the multi-million dollar Capitol which is not "finished" without them and — problem of problems — what to do about the controversial eight-foot statue of William Jennings Bryan which stands at the north entrance to the Statehouse.
