Platters Receive Thirteen Superior Music Ratings

Plattsmouth high school musicians walked off with 12 superior ratings, plus "one superior plus", the only one given at the contest.

Receiving the "superior plus" rating was the Plattsmouth high school mixed chorus, a musical aggregation of high school boys and girls.

Superior ratings went to the brass quartet, drum quartet, mixed small vocal group, boys octet, girls triple trio, Tom Zastler, cornet solo; Michael Shel-lenger, French horn solo; Nancy Perry, medium voice solo; Wendell Friest, piano solo; Shirley Story, medium voice solo; Pat Sprick, boys low voice; and Pat Painter, girls low voice.

Six Countians Are Initiated Sunday Into 40 & 8 Club

Six Cass countians, including two Plattsmouth men were among candidates initiated in the 40 & 8 at the annual spring week held at Omaha Sunday.

Countians initiated were Cecil Karr and James Begley of Plattsmouth; John Jackman, Albert Inman, Wilber Fitzpatrick and Richard Street of Louisville.

Among the nearly 25 lined up at 8 a. m. today, probably 75 per cent were Plattsmouth businessmen or at least persons readily available to exercise their filing powers. The steady stream of customers prevailed throughout the morning and a line was still formed early this afternoon.

With completion of the filing period, County Assessor Giles and Commissioners Herman Bornemeier, Ray Norris and W. F. Nolte are preparing for the start of the board of equalization sessions.

Meanwhile the attorney general has ruled that interpretation of the county levy limitation law under the revised assessment statute enables county boards to levy up to a 10 mill levy. Under the older "actual value" statute, it was limited to 5 mills. The legislature, in cutting the assessments to 50 per cent of actual valuation, merely enabled county boards to double their mill levy.

Assessor office personnel also will have the task of preparing revised property valuations during the next two to four weeks before the board of equalization goes into session. Property owners must be notified by mail of any changes in valuation. A movement to notify property owners of valuation changes by publication in a newspaper was defeated in the legislature.

Giles' regular assistants, Miss Clara Olson and Mrs. Ann Hiner, plus some special help will have to prepare assessment valuation changes for about 8,000 property owners in Cass county.

All the property owners affected do not have to be notified by the May 4 date for the first session of the board of equalization, they must be prepared as soon as possible and must be completed before the board adjourns. A movement is currently underway to extend the opening session of the board of equalization from the first Monday in May to the third Monday, a two week period.

At least six Cass countians will be among the 254 girls attending Girls' State on the Campus of the University of Nebraska in June.

They are Miss Evelyn Henry of Plattsmouth, Carol Ann Pike of Union, Phyllis Switzer of Nehawka, Joycecla Eldenmiller of Elmwood, Jean Rae Brown of Louisville, and JoAnn Bender of Weeping Water.

Sponsored by Legion Auxiliary units in each of the communities, the girls were selected on the basis of scholarship, leadership and character. The camp will be held the week of June 9-15.

Minford Tells Feeders' Tour Plans for Saturday

Will A. Minford, president of the Cass County Cornbelt Livestock Feeders Association today announced the itinerary for the annual Cass Feeders' tour to be held in the northeast part of the county on April 25th.

The tour will center around the Mynard, Plattsmouth and Cedar Creek areas and will be featured by a noon luncheon at Mynard United Brethren church and a short business meeting.

Starting at 9 a. m. with assembly at the Plattsmouth Sale Barn, the touring feeders will first visit the lots of W. Newton Sullivan. In order, they will then stop at the Richard Spangler, Rogers & Bornemeier and Myron Wiles farms before that noon luncheon.

In the afternoon, the group will resume the tour at the Elmonnet & Schmidt lots and in order will hit the John & Bill Halmes, Fred Wehrbein, Sterling Ingwersen farms.

Minford calls particular attention to safe driving during the tour to avert possible mishaps and to make the tour progress as safely and rapidly as possible. He suggests that drivers keep at safe distances on the road and that in parking they park close to the cab ahead.

One of two annual features of the Feeders' Association, the tour brings hundreds of farmers and stockmen into the area to check feeder lots and to compare notes on feeding. The other annual feature is the Feeders Banquet, held about two months ago.

Journal Tops General Excellence; Takes Community Service Award

Placed Second Last Year In Over-all Excellence; Third Service Award

The Plattsmouth Journal, in the eyes of judges of the Nebraska Press Association general excellence contest, is the tops in its field in Nebraska. That was their decision when they announced that the Journal placed first in general excellence for 1952 in communities over 2,000 population.

And for the third time in four years, the Journal again won the Ak-Sar-Ben community service award, for service to the community "above the general call of duty." The Journal also won the service awards in 1949 and 1951.

Presented at the annual convention of the Nebraska Press Association at Lincoln last Friday night, the awards were accepted by Ronald R. Furse, publisher of the Journal.

In receiving the general excellence award over the Sidney, Nebraska semi-weekly Telegraph, the Journal advanced from the second place spot which it gained a year ago. The excellence awards were inaugurated last year.

Judging in the general excellence contest is based on:

Mechanical excellence 25
General and Departmental news coverage 25
Literary excellence 10
Promotion of community interest 10
Editorial page 15
Advertising enterprise 15

A framed certificate, signifying that the Journal placed first in the contest, was presented to Mr. Furse.

Furse also accepted his third community service plaque, awarded by Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben. The plaque also carries a $200 award which the newspaper will use on a community service project.

In submitting entry in the Community Service project, the Journal banked heavily on its support of the school bond campaign here which ultimately was decided last September. Awards in the service contest are based on:

Initiation of the particular project 25
Development of public opinion in favor of the project; importance of project to community; number of people influenced; number of people served; intensity of coverage; success in ultimate outcome; benefit to the community; amount of cooperative endeavor which the paper engendered on the part of the people; estimate of the service project with respect to improvement of the community; estimate of permanent value; was more time spent than might normally be expected from the paper.

Attending the convention and award presentation Friday night were Mr. and Mrs. R. Furse, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cane, and Mrs. Sophia Wolover.

Firemen Ready Inspection Drive; Kids Participate

Home inspection blanks were distributed to Plattsmouth grade school students today as Plattsmouth Volunteer Firemen prepared to launch their city-wide fire hazard control program.

Blanks were issued to grade students, kindergarten through sixth, to take home and to make a personal check of hazards in their homes. The blanks are to be returned within four days to the school.

School kids are also participating in a slogan contest for the department in connection with Clean Up week and the city-wide fire department inspection. They are competing for $10 in cash prizes to go to the top three entries. The winning slogan will be used by the department in its program.

Meanwhile active participation in the inspection also gets underway today for the Volunteer Firemen. Groups of firemen on the inspection committee will make thorough surveys of each business establishment to check for potential fire hazards and to provide the department with complete layout of buildings to enable greater fire protective and control measures to be adopted in event of fire disaster.

The over-all inspection program will be under the direction of Ernest Yenney, chief of the Offutt Air Force fire department and members of the local unit. Teams of firemen will conduct the inspections.
