Bible Comment: Parables of Jesus Dealt With Truths That Are Timeless

The use of stories to point or illustrate truth is as old as man's efforts for expression. It has been widely prevalent in both ancient and modern times, and it has been in secular, as well as in sacred, literature. The use of the parable was not unique with Jesus. There were many parables in the Old Testament. The parable was a natural incident of oriental imagery and figure of speech. What was unique in the parables of Jesus was their supreme quality as stories and their effectiveness in spreading the message of truth. The parable is usually thought of as an imaginary tale. That's how the dictionary defines it. But the parable actually need not concern itself with whether the incidents described did or did not happen in real life. The parables of Jesus were true to life, even though they were imaginary. They told of what might have happened and what does happen. Moreover, what the parables of Jesus relate might happen in any time or place. They are as true to life today as they were in the days when Jesus uttered them. The parable of the Good Samaritan still shows what a good neighbor is like. And it still shows that even a despised Samaritan acting as a good neighbor is nearer to God and his fellowmen than a pretentiously religious hypocrite who despises his neighbor. Probably the most famous parables outside of the Bible are the Fables of Aesop. Aesop wrote much of animals, but he really had in mind people, to whom he was offering wisdom and counsel. It is noticeable that the parables of Jesus were of people. They were not of animals or imaginary beings.

book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy. "A finite and material sense of God leads to formalism and narrowness; it chills the spirit of Christianity. Infinite Mind is the creator, and creation is the infinite image or idea emanating from this Mind. If Mind is within and without all things, then all is Mind; and this definition is scientific."
