Farmerettes Close 4-H Year

The ten girls in the Fairview Farmerettes Club closed their year Friday night. Since their project had been lounging and sleeping clothes, they met at the home of Marilyn Mendenhall at 6:30 for a wieners roast followed by a slumber party. Each girl wore the garments she had made during the summer. The boys in the club had enjoyed a wieners roast and theatre party at an earlier date.

CROSS REPLACED
On Monday the cross on the Catholic church building, which was torn down by a storm some time ago, was placed there again. The work was done by the telephone men, who used the fire truck ladders.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bailey of Portland, Oregon are on their way here for a visit. They will have their quarters with Alma Clements, and from there go to various places.

Guy and Sanford Clements were Lincoln visitors on Friday.

Mrs. Mabel Wood is painting her garage.

Retail Sales in Cass County Are Up in August

Retail sales index for Cass county and 12 other Nebraska counties, released by the Department of Business Research, college of business administration at the University of Nebraska, shows that sales in Cass county were up considerably in August over the previous year, but down from July, 1953.

Sales in Cass county, the department points out, were up 11.5 percent in August over August over August, 1952, but they dropped 5.5 percent from July of this year. Of the 13 counties in the survey, seven showed increases over a year ago, but only three were up from the previous month.

The department bulletin advises Nebraska businessmen to put their house in order to meet the threat of a drastic readjustment within the next two years.

To Be Profitable, Dairy Calves Need Good Start

If the dairy heifer calf born today is to be the profitable-producing cow of tomorrow, it is important she have a good start and develop normally, says C. W. Nibler, extension dairy husbandman at the University of Nebraska.

Calves should always have the colostrum milk from their mothers for at least three days after their birth. Following the colostrum-feeding period, it is important that calves receive whole milk for about three weeks until they are strong enough to be placed on skim milk or a milk replacement ration. It is best to feed whole milk from cows producing milk to win butterfat and free of mastitis. The amount of milk to feed calves will depend upon their size, but it is never advisable to feed more than 10 percent of the calf's live weight.

In other words, an 80-pound calf should receive 7 to 8 pounds of milk daily. For young calves that may be a little weak or slow in starting, two or three raw eggs added to the milk many times is helpful in getting calves off to a good start.

Calves should be furnished coarsely ground grain such as corn and oats as soon as they will nibble on this grain. A little grain rubbed on the nose of calves after they have consumed their milk will help to get calves to eating grain. The period covering the first three or four weeks is a critical time for the calves, and a good start is important in raising calves.

Grade Tells Story Of Profitable Egg Production

Grade tells the quality or the inside story of eggs, according to J. H. Claybaugh, extension poultry specialist at the University of Nebraska.

These egg grades have been set up by the U.S.D.A. and State Departments of Agriculture Standards. The grades are AA, A, B, and C and all sizes are graded into these grades. It's only when you break the eggs out at home can you tell if you have received the quality eggs you paid for.

U.S. AA and A have a high standing yolk and thick white that doesn't spread over the dish when broken. They are best for cooking in the shell, poaching and frying.

U.S. B has a yolk that spreads flatter and thinner and there is very little thick white. This grade is good for use in cooking and in baking.

U.S. Grade C spreads over a large area and the yolk breaks easily. This grade is also good for use in cooking and in baking.

There is no difference in the nutritive value between the grades. But for economy, use the less expensive lower grades in cooked products.
