Defoliating Sorghum With Spray Is Said Impractical

Extension agronomists at the University of Nebraska say that to the best of their knowledge there is no spray material which can be safely used for the defoliation of Sorghum which is to be used in making molasses.

Many chemicals now available would do a good job of drying up the leaves but the residue would remain on the stalk. This would cause off flavors or serious effects in the molasses.

Where sugar cane is produced on a commercial scale, there are generally enough dead leaves in the field to obtain good defoliation by simply burning the dead leaves.

EYES AND STOMACH AGREE

At least one Nebraska man can boast that his "eyes are not bigger than his stomach." He is Floyd Clement, a Scotia farmer who won first prize at Scotia's annual "Pancake Day" by eating 32 pancakes—complete with butter, syrup and sausage.

ARMS SPENDING

Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson has forecast a drop of $2,000,000,000 in defense spending in the next fiscal year from the $42,000,000,000 that is expected to be spent this year for the Army, Navy and Air Force.

FARM PRICES

Prices of farm products declined about three-fourths of 1 per cent between mid-August and mid-September. This decline lowered the farm price level to about 19 per cent below the record set in February, 1951, and was about 10 per cent below the level of a year ago.
