Capitol News

LINCOLN—As the new State Highway Advisory Commission held its first meeting here this week, members found out that their job of "planning the state highway system" covered a lot of ground.

For one thing, there are already 9,600 miles on the state highway system. And the catch is that even with the new revenues provided by the 1953 Legislature, it will take nine years before all the roads that the State Highway Department considered "dangerously" sub-par can be improved.

Then Legislatures through the years have passed bills establishing statutory routes which never got built. There are 1,865 miles of these routes scattered in 72 places all over the state.

A good reason for not building these is that the Department has been saddled with other types of roads through the years.

For example, the Legislature once passed a law authorizing the Department to build a connecting state highway to the following kinds of cities and villages:

Any incorporated city or village within two miles of a state highway.
Any village with a population of at least 50 and a post office if within three miles of a state highway.
Any incorporated village not served by a railroad if within six miles of a state highway.

Another "glitch" which added roads to the Department's responsibility—and seldom with any increase in revenue—was a law which said the state should maintain any roads built in part by federal funds. So counties matched federal funds for the improvement of their roads.

BEEF KABOBS ADDS ZEST TO PICNICS

Beef kabobs can add zest to any picnic or to a meal at home says Kathryn Cooley, extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska.

This popular dish can be cooked over an open fire out of doors or broiled in the oven at home. For fall picnics, it is an excellent variation.

To make "Beef Kabobs on Skewers", cut beef steak into 1 1/2 inch cubes. Alternate cubes on the skewers with thin slices of raw onion, bacon, firm tomatoes, mushrooms, or green peppers. Before broiling or roasting over the open fire, roll the filled skewers in melted butter or margarine.

Allow about 18 minutes for minutes for broiling beef kabobs rare, up to 25 minutes for well done. Whether broiling or roasting, turn them frequently so they will cook evenly on all sides.

Refrigerated Dough Makes Hot Rolls In Hurry

Home-baked rolls can be served often with a minimum of effort when you keep refrigerated dough on hand.

Ethel Diedrichsen, extension food and nutrition specialist at the University of Nebraska, tells us that dough can be made when it is most convenient and stored in the refrigerator. It will keep well in this way for several days. When you want fresh rolls for dinner, just shape as many rolls as are needed and return the remaining dough to the refrigerator.

Explosives Hauling
A neat bit of "toss the hot potato" was exhibited at the Statehouse when Gov. Robert Crosby called a meeting to discuss the problem of hauling explosives. The truckers were there to prove they were victims of "hysteria" arising from the fire-caused explosion of an ammunition warehouse of Omaha. The representatives of the army and the department of defense were there to see that the hauling of these essential materials wasn't unduly hampered. Omaha safety officials were there trying to get action on all dangerous types of hauling. City officials were there to get backing for proposed ordinances to either ban or slow down the trucks. Conspicuously absent were the railroads who would stand to gain the most if ammunition trucks were banned from the highways.

Nothing much happened in the way of constructive conclusions. Everybody agreed that explosives are dangerous. Most agreed that a country engaged in preparing for defense against war has to have these dangerous things around. The truckers worked hard to get government witnesses to endorse a recent statement by James K. Knudson, administrator of the Defense Transportation Administration, that "the truck record is as safe as any other. And it was obvious that Gov. Crosby wasn't going to get himself involved in the bitter dispute any more than necessary.

For observers it was an interesting reversal of a scene weeks before when operators of motels, restaurants, and service stations had come in to plead with Crosby and State Engineer L. N. Resch that there be no planning of bypasses which would take highways out of their towns. But at the ammunition hearing the cry from the cities was to bar the trucks — which have the same legal rights to the highways as any other motor vehicle — from traveling through the centers of the towns and possibly blowing them to kingdom come with explosives. A neat example of the "eat our cake and have it too" theory in the opinion of some observers.
