Death of Senator Dwight Griswold Monday in Washington came as a severe shock to his many friends in Nebraska. We have known him for many years—long before he succeeded in becoming Nebraska's governor after three attempts. He was always a man of character—honest and dependable—during his many years of service to his state and nation. His loss will be keenly felt in Republican political circles of Nebraska.

Death of Griswold caused a great stir in the ranks of Nebraska Republicans. Even before his body could be lowered into the grave, there were undercurrents of attempts to put a finger on his successor. Plattsmouth even entered the picture Wednesday through one of the state papers carrying a list of names of prospective appointees, listing Henry J. Schneider, former president of Plattsmouth State Bank and now Chairman of the Board of Directors, and a long time political wheel-horse in Republican circles.

While we wouldn't be adverse having a Senator from our home town, knowing that Henry would be on the job, carry out his duties without fear or favor, and always have his "listener" tuned in, we think Nebraska Republicans will make a great mistake if they fail to name Mrs. Dwight Griswold to fill out her late husband's unexpired term. Mrs. Griswold is a lady of extreme wisdom, has campaigned with her husband for years and can be depended upon to follow the party down the line. This would surely meet approval of the rank and file, would throw the Senatorial spot wide open to the field and let the people decide who shall represent them for the next six years in Washington. What a campaign that would be.

With Plattsmouth's annual clean up campaign drawing near, we liked this little item that appeared in Art Sweet's column, "Community Chatting" in the Nebraska City News-Press: "Although the neighbors on both sides of them and those across the street have neatly kept yards, the X's yard always looks like a junk yard. Maybe the X's don't care, but the neighbors get tired of looking at the one yard in the neighborhood that is an eyesore. Evidently the X's never heard of the old Polish proverb: 'If everyone swept in front of his house, the whole town would be clean.'"

There is a good chance kids in Plattsmouth and this area will have a roller skating rink for their summer enjoyment this year if present plans go through. Owner of an outdoor rink was in the city Wednesday, has made application for a license and is seeking a location. This is one wholesome recreation most parents will welcome with open arms. We hope those who are contacted relative to licensing and location will cooperate. Plattsmouth can use this enterprise.

Having sold supplies to local government institutions in Nebraska for a time a good number of years ago, we're always inclined to cast a suspicious eye on any order that has been diverted to an outside concern without giving local merchants, manufacturers, or suppliers at least an opportunity to submit a bid. We've seen a lot of suitcases, clothes, entertainment chits, and even cash on occasion, change hands in our time.

That "Suds In Your Eye" lady out California way (the one accusing Bob Walling and this writer of stealing that little paragraph that appeared in Reader's Digest at the turn of the year) sent us the book the other day along with a nice letter commending us for such a nice newspaper and wishing us continued success, which makes us very happy.

The lady from Mill Valley (a pretty sounding name) says that all is forgiven. She thinks that Miami night club stole their stunt from Mary Lasswell's book, "Suds, etc.," as we informed her that we had never stolen anything in our lives but a kiss or two, and at our age, and the state of matrimony we're in, probably never would again unless, of course, we should ever come to Mill Valley.

She continued: "Well, if you want to kiss Grandma when you come to Mill Valley, you may. You remind me of my session with the Social Security. It was necessary for me to go to S. F. to the Federal building after my husband died, to get the matter straight. (It took 2 hrs.) The last thing was, 'Now if you get married again you must let us know at once.' I said, 'My husband died one week ago today, we had been married for 54 years and this is my 79th birthday. When I marry again I will send you engraved invitations.' My checks come: 'Mary E. Rand an unmarried widow.' I still am wondering where they found that word. It is not in the dictionary. 'UNREARRIED — My Land!'"

That's just our luck. About the time we enter a correspondence with some unattached female we learn she's a gray-haired grandma and 79 years old. However, in our condition, we would probably explode kissing one younger than that. Too, we learned a long time ago, "Where there's frost on the roof, generally there's a fire in the furnace." —RRF

Two Weeks Left To Complete FCIC Applications

Only two weeks remain for completing applications for federal crop insurance, according to Albin E. Chovanec, Cass county agent.

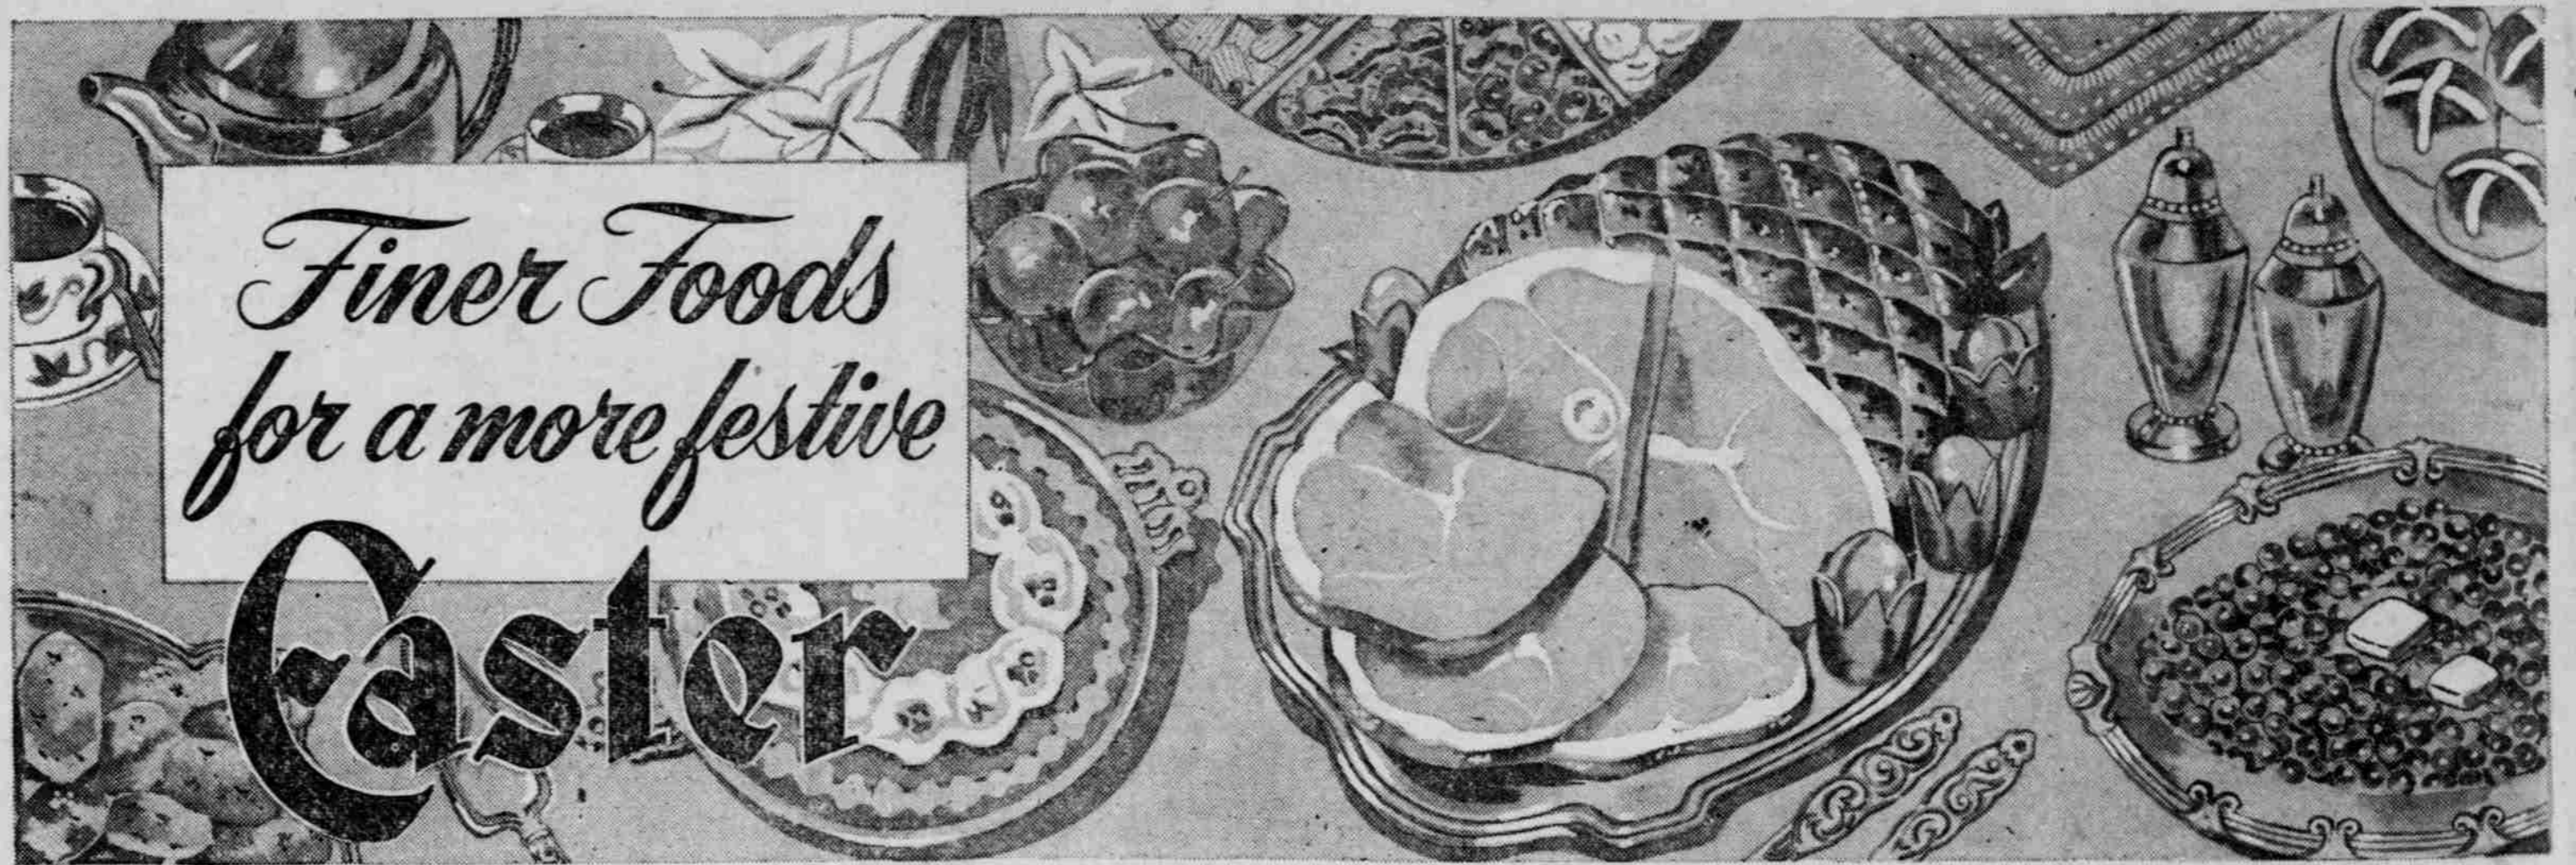

Deadline for completing applications is April 30, just two weeks hence. To assist farmers in completing their applications, Chovanec plans to keep his office open until 10 p. m. on the final two days.

Sale of Richy Property Told

Stephen M. Davis, realtor, announced completion of the sale of the Mrs. E. J. Richey property at 510 Avenue F to Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy W. Moore of Plattsmouth. The Moores will take possession May 1, Mr. Davis said.
