

Stop Sign, Speeding Violations Are Aired at Council Meeting

Ex-councilman E. O. Vroman opened debate on traffic violations during the city council meeting Monday night when he pointed out that he had observed numerous violations of the Chicago Avenue school stop lights during recent weeks.

Speaking from the floor, Vroman pointed out that the life of Plattsmouth school children are in danger unless the stop signs are enforced.

That was all the city father's needed to launch discussion on methods of controlling violations both speeding and passing stop signs in the city.

A "get tough" attitude, along with additional measures of control will apparently be the result. In discussing the school stop signs on Washington and Chicago Avenues, councilmen were quick to point out the excessive speeds are as much to blame as anything.

With that in mind councilmen went about establishing new speed limitations which will probably be put into effect within a short time. Among consideration by councilmen are 35 mile zones entering the city on both the north and south highway approaches to the city. That limit would be cut to 25 entering Washington Avenue from Webster Boulevard on the north, and at Oakmont on the south approach. Downtown limits and residential limits would be set at 15 miles an hour.

Should the new limits be put in force, the council has also recommended that they be strictly enforced.

Speeding on the new Winter-street paving also came under discussion by councilmen, who authorized erection of a stop sign at the entrance of Valley View addition on the approach to Highway 75.

Warren Rhylander also explained that P-TA warning signs will be erected on the three highway approaches to the city in the near future.

During the discussion, Councilmen also quizzed Police Chief Kenneth Dunlap on the question of enforcing the law. Mindful of the two week period in which no violations were reported, the council was advised that violators had been issued warnings during the period.

TEEN-AGERS, you will already have purchased your gift for Mother's Day by now, but the problem is to find a special way to give it to her. After all, this occasion calls for a gesture of affection on your part—the sort of loving act that means more than any gift. Here's an idea. Why not serve Mother her breakfast in bed? As you know, that's a rare luxury for mothers, and she'll enjoy it doubly because you prepared her meal yourself.

Here's a suggested menu for a full three-course breakfast, taking full advantage of canned and pre-processed foods:

Deviled Scrambled Eggs
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons milk or cream
¼ teaspoon salt
Few grains pepper
1 2 1/2 oz. can deviled ham

Blend eggs with cream or milk, salt, pepper and 2 tablespoons of the deviled ham. (2 tablespoons is about half the can—you can use the rest for sandwiches later in the day.) Pour the mixture into the buttered top of a double boiler. Cook over hot water, stirring often with a fork until creamy and set. Garnish with an additional teaspoon of deviled ham and parsley. This makes one serving.
