By JAMES C. OLSON, Superintendent STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Just a century ago this week, Francis Burt, who had recently been appointed governor of the far-off Territory of Nebraska by President Franklin Pierce, was preparing to leave his home in Pendleton, South Carolina, to make his way to his new post beyond the Missouri.

home permanently in the new territory. He had been active in South Carolina politics, and at the time of his appointment was serving as third auditor in the treasury department—a post similar to a present assistant secretary. His political career had taken him away from home a great deal of time and both he and Mrs. Burt were anxious to establish themselves permanently. They hoped that the permanent establishment would be the new territory of Nebraska.

Mrs. Burt apparently intended to join her husband as soon as suitable arrangements could be made. Instead, of course, his body was borne back to Pendleton, South Carolina, in a mournful procession.

Thus ended the career of the first governor of Nebraska territory—a career which, insofar as Nebraska relationships were concerned, began with his appointment August 2, 1854, and his departure from Pendleton, South Carolina, September 11.

Manoah B. Reese, who served as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court from 1888 to 1890 and from 1908 to 1915, was born on September 5, 1839. Not much information is available relative to his early Illinois career, but he removed from Illinois to Osceola, Iowa, and then later in the fall of 1871 to Plattsmouth.

In a few months he moved on to Ashland and shortly thereafter to Wahoo where he practiced law for ten years, or until his election to the Supreme Court. Even before that, though, he was active in public life in his new state. He was a member of the constitutional convention of 1875, and served as District Attorney in the 4th judicial district from 1876 to 1884.

Judge Reese had many antagonists in his own party and in 1889 he met defeat in seeking the Republican renomination. He won the nomination again in 1899, but was defeated by former Governor Silas Holcomb, a Populist. He got the Republican nomination again in 1907, and was elected.
