Feeders Day At North Platte This Thursday

The program for the 24th annual fall feeders' day at the North Platte experimental station promises to be one of the best yet states Supt. James C. Adams. In addition to seeing 21 lots of yearlings and two year old steers on test, those attending the all day event this Thursday, Sept. 30, will witness the dedication of a new feed barn. The barn contains some of the more modern equipment for handling and mixing livestock rations.

Speakers include Howard J. Gramlich, agricultural development agent for the Northwestern railway and former chairman of the University of Nebraska animal husbandry department; Byron Sadie, well known livestock breeder and feeder of Paxton who will tell of his operations including the use of irrigated pastures; W. W. Derriek, extension animal husbandryman, Nebraska College of Agriculture, will discuss farm sheep flocks; and Dr. M. L. Baker, associate director of agricultural research, Lincoln, Nebraska, will conclude the afternoon program.

Inspection of test cattle will begin at the west place barns at 10 a. m. Lunch will be served on the grounds at noon. Five lots of test cattle have been on summer range with four lots receiving supplemental feed, including soybean meal, corn, and molasses in different combinations. Four lots of two year old steers are being fattened by different methods and 12 lots of yearling steers are being fed protein supplements of different levels and different mixtures of soybean meal and dehydrated alfalfa meal.

CHARLESTON, W. Va. — Dan Martin, 48, gave police a workout after police saw him run through a red light. Nabbed by the cops after playing a game of automobile hide-and-seek, Martin was finally brought to headquarters, where it took more than a half hour to list the 24 charges against him. Martin was booked on 14 charges or
