

Claim Roads Can Drop Price of Beef

What have good roads got to do with the price of beef? Quite a bit, according to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Fifty years ago, most cattle, as well as other livestock, made a part of their journey to market on the hoof with a considerable loss of weight. Today, thousands of head of beef cattle are trucked to market over the highways. That saves a lot of weight loss, but there is still a premium on time.

For example, a cattle farmer expects a 33-pound loss in weight of a 1,000-pound steer in the first 100 miles of travel. Even a three-hour extension in trip time will knock another six pounds off his steer. Thus at 15 cents a pound, any time saved by better highways, would be worth 30 cents an hour per animal.

Obviously, the Chamber notes, good farm to market roads have a definite effect on the price of beef.

Actually, good roads mean good business in general.

That is why the Chamber expects to provide President Eisenhower and the state governors late this year with comprehensive recommendations for street and highway improvements throughout the nation, in line with the president's proposal for a $50 billion highway program.

The Chamber also will sponsor at least three highway conferences in coming months, the first of which was at Topeka, Kans., Sept. 30.

This and That In Agriculture

After watching the livestock being cared for at the Ak - Sar-Ben one realizes more than 4-H club livestock projects involve the combined efforts of the whole family. Picture the activities of a hive of bees and you have a good view of the tremendous amount of work that goes into the preparation for showing at the Ak - Sar - Ben. Yes it is safe to say that many of the boys and girls can trace a large extent of their successes at their County Fairs, State Fair, and the Ak-Sar-Ben to cooperative parents.

SAVES WEAR ON DISK
A trailer drawbar extension prevents strain on landing implements in the tandem tillage rig used by an Ohio farmer. The outfit consists of a disk hooked directly to the tractor drawbar and a harrow and cultipacker pulled from the trailer drawbar. The trailer tongue arches over the disk to connect with the tractor drawbar. A 4 by 4 timber mounted across the top of the harrow prevents fouling of the long chain which connects cultipacker to trailer.

RESEAL OLD CORN
Resealing your old corn may be the best bet if the crop turns out to be normal or smaller. You know the quality, and it will be handy. Weigh the benefits of government resealing payment of 15 cents a bushel against costs. Annual storage costs vary from farm to farm, but 10 cents a bushel can be used as a rough guide.

MISFITS
One-third of the adult Americans do not fit well into modern life, with the result that they are filling the divorce courts, hospitals and welfare agencies of the country, according to a study recently completed by the American Public Health Association.
