Workers Return To Their Work At Allied Plant

Several hundred workers went back to work this morning at Allied Chemical and Dye Corp. nitrogen plant at LaPlatte after the Omaha metal trades council and company officials reached an agreement ending a 15-day old strike.

The agreement was reached Sunday night, and according to a statement includes a 4 1/2-cents-an-hour pay increase each of the two years covered by the agreement; a seniority plan; and "other clauses."

The seniority plan had been the main stumbling block during negotiations. The company had called the union's plan "unworkable," while union officials had maintained they were not trying to set up job or training standards, but that those things were the sole right of the company.

During the strike, which began Oct. 29, pickets blocked all traffic into and out of the plant for several days, and a group of supervisory workers stayed in the plant the entire time to maintain production. Negotiations were halted for a week, and Governor Crosby called on company and union officials to get together for more talks. The company and union agreed, Allied insisting that the picketing laws be observed first.

During the first days of the strike, someone cut a telephone cable into the plant; a truck was damaged; and the families of some non-striking workers claimed they were threatened. An airplane was used to haul in food, mail and other material needed by supervisory workers operating the plant, and non-striking workers were not permitted to leave.

The nitrogen plant has been in operation at LaPlatte only a few months. R. L. Riggs is plant manager.

His teacher, Mrs. Laura Webb, sent the picture to the president with the comment that a second-grader with that much admiration for the president was deserving of a picture. The desired picture was promptly forthcoming.

The school board has furnished a frame, and District 43 school is the proud possessor of "Ike's" picture.

Dodges to Be Out of Wraps On Wednesday

The 1955 Dodge passenger car line, an advanced concept in automotive body design, will be introduced this week in the Bryant Motors showroom and across the nation.

Dodge engineers have incorporated over 60 structural and mechanical innovations in the longer, lower and wider 1955 line.

Offering three series — the new and luxurious Custom Royal and the classic Coronet — the '55 Dodge has a built-in look of action, resulting from its swept-back design.

Performance to bear out the styling is provided by a wide choice of engines — the "Get-Away Six" developing 123 horsepower, the all-new Red Ram V-8 rated at 175 horsepower, the Super Red Ram V-8 at 183 horsepower, and the super-powered Super Red Ram V-8 at 193 horsepower.

Another automotive first for Dodge in the introduction of three - tone combinations on Dodge Lancer hardtop and convertible models. The multiple-tone paints accent the flair styling and permit new combinations in exterior color design.

A choice of two transmissions includes the fully automatic PowerFlite drive with Dodge's "scat" gear for safe passing, and standard easy-shift transmission with or without overdrive.

The new "rudder bar" power brake pedal and clutch pedal (with standard transmission) have been suspended from under the control panel. This provides more efficient driving operation and eliminates the possibility of road dust and dirt entering holes in the floormat.

Optional new features on the 1955 Dodge line include power brakes, power-controlled seats, power window lifts, and a back seat high-fidelity radio speaker. Tubeless tires are standard equipment for the first time on all models.
