have had difficulty with this, too. It may be, however, there is a solution for us in what some other state is doing," said Herrington.

He added that it may become apparent that a study of some type will be needed. Herrington said a really good study would take more time than his present office staff could handle.

If such a study were called for, it might be done by either a special Legislative Council committee or by appropriating more money for the tax commissioner's office.

Either method would require action by the Legislature and might put some senators on the "hot seat" in how they vote on a proposition.

Commission Costs

Also worrying the railroads—and telephone companies—is a bill which would assess them for their share of the costs of operating the State Railway Commission which regulates them. At a public hearing on the measure, LB532, it was brought out that the truckers and grain warehousemen pay for their share of the commission's operation on a fee system while the railroads and telephone companies don't pay any such fees. Spokesmen for these interests claimed they paid plenty of taxes, that the commission regulation was of no benefit to them, and that any increased cost would just be passed on the consumer.

Why Costs Rise

The Legislature has tentatively approved adding a fourth category of welfare assistance in Nebraska—aid to the totally disabled.

This would be an entirely new program in addition to the present categories of old age assistance, aid to the blind, and aid to dependent children.

Forty states now have such programs, in which the federal government liberally participates.

But during debate on the bill Sen. Lester Anderson of Aurora said a mouthful on why the costs of government keep rising. The new category will add $3.2 million to the state biennial budget, including $1.4 million from the state general fund and $1.8 million in federal money.

Anderson remarked, "I'm not saying this isn't a good bill to do millions of dollars worth of good for the 'forgotten people.' But if anyone wonders why we've come from a $30 million budget a few years ago to where we are now approaching the quarter of a billion mark—well, this will explain it."

"Someday we are going to have to bow our necks and decide how far we are going to follow the other states and the federal government. When is it going to stop? How far are we going to go?"

Future Costs

Small cheer on this same line of philosophy came to the Budget Committee from University of Nebraska Chancellor Clifford Hardin. He was discussing the University's request for $3.8 million more in tax funds for an $18.8 million total.

Budget Committee Chairman Hal Bridenbaugh of Dakota City pointed out that the University budget has grown from $6 million in 1947 to $15 million at present.

Chancellor Hardin remarked, "It's safe to say that we will be in for another increase two years from now." He mentioned expected increased enrollments, the competition for teachers which raises salary costs, and the expanding television program.

In another committee hearing Don Kline of the State Education Association was asked how he could justify his production of increased school costs all over the state with the declining farm income.

"There is no statistical relationship between the number of children being born each year and farmers' income," Kline replied.
