Industrial Space
At Fair Demanded
Although the Nebraska State Fair, Sept. 3-9 at Lincoln, is still almost three months away, the demand for industrial exhibit space is at a high level and promises to exceed the supply.

"As a result, I'm looking for a space-stretcher," said Jack Hutchens, superintendent of exhibits and space. "Every year for the past several years, we have re-arranged both our indoor and outdoor space to make more room available for commercial and industrial exhibits and still we haven't been able to accommodate everyone."

"The demand for space at the 1955 Fair is now well under way and, if I can just find a little more room, it looks like another record-breaker."

All of which means that fairgoers query of "What's new" will be answered by acres of farm machinery and equipment, home appliances, and products in many other fields.

New Foundation Formed at Peru To Solicit Aid

PERU — Articles of incorporation for the newly formed "Nebraska State Teachers College at Peru Achievement Foundation" were filed in the office of the clerk of Nemaha County Tuesday morning.

The action followed an organization meeting held Monday evening on the Peru State campus at which time a number of interested backers of the college formed the corporation by acting favorably upon a proposed set of articles prepared and presented by Harvey A. Neumeister Nebraska City attorney and a Peru alumnus.

It will be the purpose of the corporation to aid Peru State College "by the solicitation of gifts, grants, devises and bequests... of real property or personal property... for the benefit of said college."

The primary objective of the organization will be to build up and administer funds to provide scholarship aid to needy students, Peru officials said Tuesday.

Twenty-one organizers present all signed an agreement to act as members of the first board of trustees and immediately named a nine-member executive committee with Jack McIntyre, Falls City, being named as president. Marie O. Neal and Arthur Lindahl, vice-president and treasurer, respectively. Other members are Harvey A. Neumeister, Nebraska City; S. L. Clements, Elmwood; Helen C. Pollard and D. E. Donovan of Peru; Fred Rothert, Auburn and Cassius; Kennedy, Brownville; Kenneth M. Heywood, Peru, was named as secretary of the committee and as Resident Agent of the Achievement Foundation.

COOPERATION
President Eisenhower, in a commencement address at Pennsylvania State University, renewed his plea for Soviet cooperation in an international program to "open a broad avenue to world progress" through the peaceful exploitation of atomic energy. He also proposed that the United States pay half of the cost of building experimental research reactors in friendly foreign countries.
