Salk Vaccine Law Brings Additional Inspector Needs

The Food and Drug Administration of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare must add 20 food and drug inspectors to its staff as the result of recent Congressional action requiring the Department to check the sale and distribution of the Salk polio vaccine. It was announced by John W. Godbold, Director, Ninth U. S. Civil Service Regional Office, St. Louis, which conducts the civil service examination for appointment to these positions. Food and drug inspectors will be stationed at the district headquarters in St. Louis and in Kansas City and Minneapolis. They will travel in surrounding states in making checks on Salk vaccine.

These positions start at $3,670 a year. The inspectors also receive travel allowances as well as other fringe benefits of the Federal Civil Service career system.

Inspectors must have a college education or equivalent experience in chemistry, chemical engineering, pharmacy, or in other fields such as bacteriology.
