Bible Comment: Apocryphal Books Bridge Gap In Bible History

THE period between the Old and New Testaments is one to which comparatively little attention is paid by Bible readers, but it was of great importance in the development of Judaism and in the preparation for Christianity.

Over 400 years elapsed between the last writing of the Old Testament and the first writing in the New. The period was not without religious writing, as readers of the Apocryphal Books of the Old Testament well know, but the 14 books, varying in value, were not a part of the Hebrew Canon, which closed with the Book of Malachi.

This period of over 400 years saw the rise and fall of the Persian empire, its overthrow in the world conquest of Alexander the Great and the ascendancy of Greece, and the domination of the world by Rome, completed shortly before the Christian era, which was to continue throughout four centuries of Christian development.

That faith and hope and goodness, and devout expectation of the coming of the Messiah, could persist through all the persecutions and cruelties, the murderous rivalries and struggles for power, and the repeated and determined efforts to pervert the purity of religion, ought to give us faith that that out of darkness bound in our own new era of truth and love and righteousness will dawn for mankind.
