Bible Comment:

Jacob Shows How Religion Beters Us

JACOB at his worst was one of the meanest and shiftest characters on record, either in Holy Writ or in the secular records of human life. He tricked his elder brother, Esau, out of the birthright, and in other incidents he showed himself a cowardly and selfish man.

But Jacob at his best proved to be a man upon whom something could be built, whereas the more likeable, good-natured Esau, like many likeable, good-natured men, was weak. He was undependable, unwilling to bear much responsibility.

And also, Jacob at his best had some remarkable spiritual experiences. Perhaps the Bible tells us so much about Jacob, at his worst and at his best and about these experiences, because even mean and shifty men can be saved from their meanness and shiftness. They can have visions of ladders reaching to heaven, and can find God. For God is no respecter of persons, and he does help those who call upon Him in sincerity and truth, even if their character and past conduct have not been what they ought to have been.

A man who begins to be religious can get a better religious experience—a better religion. He can grow in grace. It is the man who never makes a beginning who comes to nothing. Jacob DID come to something better. Bethel was the first step; Peniel (Genesis) saw him really a changed man.

Divine healing — healing through spiritual means alone—will be a topic dealt with at Christian Science services Sunday in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Spirit."

Luke's account of Christ Jesus' healing of the "woman which had a spirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wise lift up herself" (Luke 13) will be included in the readings from the King James Version of the Bible.

Correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will include the following (316-7): "Christ, Truth, was demonstrated through Jesus to prove the power of Spirit over the flesh, — to show that Truth is made manifest by its effects upon the human mind and body, healing sickness and destroying sin."

The Golden Text is from Psalms (143:10): "Teach me to do thy will; for thou art my God; thy spirit is good; lead me into the land of uprightness."
