Andy Ruffner and Wife Perform Heroic Action While Fishing

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Ruffner received a letter from their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Andy Ruffner who live in Ramona, Calif.

We feel that the heroic experience of Mr. and Mrs. Ruffner while deep sea fishing the latter part of Sept. is well worth passing on to folks here at home.

The letter in part reads "We just got back from Mexico which ended up a year fishing season until next spring. We went down Sept. 16 and came back Sept. 26. We were there 10 days then went back last weekend and this weekend. There was only one day the water was too rough to go out fishing. The largest I caught was a white sea bass, he went 21 lbs. The rest of the fish we got would go 1 lb to 5 lbs. The little fish are the best eating anyway. The white sea bass is a half way fish and is real good eating.

Last weekend we had quite an experience. It was pretty rough out in the ocean that Saturday morning, so we stayed in the Bay and fished until about noon for some halibut, and we caught quite a few. After lunch that day, we all decided to go out fishing in the late afternoon which was very unusual for us, as we never went out fishing in the afternoon before in all the two weeks we were down there. We left camp about 4 p.m. and the ocean didn't look quite so rough so we went about a mile out of bay into the ocean and decided to do some fishing right there. We stopped and were about ready to drop our lines when Mom thought she heard something hollering for help, seagulls make that same kind of noise when they squawk, so we started looking around and we saw a man standing on something waving his hand and hollering, about two miles straight out farther in the ocean from us. The ocean was still pretty rough, but there was no time to go back for help, so we tried it ourselves. It was a man riding on top of his boat, which had overturned in the rough water about noon.

We were in the Mexican's good wooden boat which is 14 feet long with 5 1/2 horse Johnson Motor, which takes the waves very well. We made it out to him alright and got him into our boat safely. We had to make him swim from his boat to ours which was only a few feet, but he was very tired from riding the boat since noon. Mom and Jo helped him overboard while I kept us away from the other boat with an oar.

After he got in he asked us if we would pick up his buddy out of the water, he had seen him within the last hour. So we started looking for him. Fred (the fellow we just picked up) said his buddy had a blue life cushion and was wearing black clothes which is very hard to see in the water. But he was finally sighted a mile up the coast from the boat, so we rescued him. If we hadn't reached him when we did, he would have drowned in about 15 minutes. He said that he almost went down four times, but he kept telling himself that there would be some help pretty soon. He was about six feet tall and weighed about 200 pounds. He didn't have any strength left so we grabbed him by the belt and

TRADED GUN KILLS BOY

NEW YORK — Dennis Susumano, 15, traded a 22-caliber rifle to James Lehecka, 16, for a wristwatch. Three days later, while Dennis watched James clean the gun in his bedroom, the gun discharged, the bullet hitting Dennis in the chest, fatally wounding him. Lehecka told police he didn't know what he was doing because he never had handled a gun before.
