WILDLIFE LIKES HIS HOME

SHATTUCK, Okla. — George Howlett recently reported finding a family of raccoons in his attic. He had hardly gotten rid of them before he discovered a family of skunks bedded down under the house. It required delicate handling to evict that family but it was done.

SMALL FARMS

The House Agriculture subcommittee recently pointed out that as farm production capacity has increased, 600,000 farms have vanished between 1940 and 1954, with "factory in the field" commercial operations threatening to supplant entirely the farm family.

It Happened In NEBRASKA ---

In 1846, emigrants following the Overland Trail founded a "post office" in western Nebraska. They left letters at an abandoned trapper's log cabin with the request that later wagon trains deliver them if destinations permitted. The cabin walls were also covered with notices of lost goods and cattle.
