Cass Farmers Have Until First Of June to Set Wheat Acreage

Special To The Journal
Cass County farmers with a 1956 wheat acreage in excess of their farm wheat allotments may take action until June 1 to adjust their wheat acreage into compliance, according to Ivan G. Althouse, chairman of the county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

Wheat acreage in excess of the farm allotment may be plowed under as green manure, pastured, or cut for hay. Any of these methods used to reduce the wheat acreage must be carried out in such a way that the wheat will not reach maturity.

Farmers with allotments of less than 15 acres who now have more than 15 acres of wheat may use the same methods to reduce their wheat acreage to avoid a marketing quota penalty.

Mr. Althouse reminds wheat growers that a farm with a wheat allotment of 15 acres or less may produce as much as 15 acres of wheat without being subject to marketing quota penalties.

However, if such farms produce more than 15 acres of wheat, the marketing quota penalty is calculated on the difference between the allotment and the actual acreage harvested. The marketing quota penalty is 45 per cent of the parity price.

On farms with allotments of more than 15 acres, the normal production from any acreage in excess of the farm allotment is subject to the marketing quota penalty.

Regardless of the size of the allotment, Chairman Althouse emphasizes, wheat from any farm on which the farm allotment is exceeded is not eligible for price support.

Gas Tax Refunds
Forms which farmers will use to apply for the federal gas tax refund are not expected to be available until after June 1, Everett E. Peterson, extension agricultural economist at the University of Nebraska, said this week.

The Internal Revenue service will handle the forms. Claims will be made between July 1 and October 1, 1956 for tax refunds on gasoline and diesel fuel used for farming between January 1 and June 30, 1956, Peterson stated. After this year claims will be filed on a fiscal year basis.

Certified Seeds
Applications for seed certification are due May 20 in the Nebraska Crop Improvement Association's office at the College of Agriculture, University of Nebraska in Lincoln.

Seeds that may be certified include wheat, oats, spring barley, rye, bromegrass, wheatgrass, vetch, sweet clover, and first crop alfalfa. County Agricultural agents have applications for seed certification and can supply additional information. Persons interested in having seed certified also may obtain applications and further information by writing the Nebraska Crop Improvement Association.

Watch For Aphid
Nebraska alfalfa growers were warned this week to be on the lookout for the spotted alfalfa aphid.

A group of Nebraska farmers and alfalfa dehydrator operators from Dawson County saw heavy infestations of the insects on a field trip to southeastern Kansas last week. Since then the spotted alfalfa aphid has been found migrating north in eastern Kansas within 40 miles of the Nebraska line.

"All we need is a warm southern breeze to bring those aphids to Nebraska," according to Lloyd Anderson, assistant extension entomologist at the University of Nebraska. Where present the aphids are regarded as a major threat to alfalfa production, he added.

The spotted alfalfa aphid is about half the size of the familiar green pea aphid that may be found on alfalfa in the spring, Anderson states. Under a magnifying glass, rows of spots may be seen on its back; hence its name.

The aphid secretes large amounts of honeydew which is easily detected on infested plants. Heavy populations of the insect cause the hay to be stunted; later leaves turn brown and die.

The pest is especially destructive to new seedlings. In fact, one or two aphids feeding on a young plant often will kill it.

Plan Ahead
Planning ahead will pay hog shippers during hot weather. Don't wait till the truck pulls into the yard to do the sorting, says Livestock Conservation, Inc.

Hogs sorted out early or late in the day, or at night, and allowed to rest and cool off will load more easily and will arrive at market with less shrink and in better selling condition.

Keep Comfortable
"Keeping hogs comfortable" is one of the solutions to increasing returns from hogs without adding materially to the cost of production, points out Livestock Conservation, Inc. In fact, such discomforts as overheating, overloading and rough sorting and handling can offset much of the gains from saving more pigs per litter, stepping up the rate of gain, or producing a more attractive meat type hog.
