Bible Comment: True Christian Is More Than A Churchgoer

PAUL was brought up as a Pharisee in the strict letter of the law. The Pharisees were the party of strict observance. We must not imagine that Jesus thought ill of them or criticized them lightly.
It was precisely because the Pharisees were so devout and earnest that Jesus used them often for illustration, to show that a man might observe all the outward proprieties of religion and yet lack its inward reality and grace.
If we substitute "church member" for "Pharisee" we might obtain clearer insight into what Jesus meant. Mere membership in a church does not make any man what he ought to be. Some who have been punctilious in all outward observances have often been lacking in the elemental Christian virtues.
If we think of a man going up to the throne of God and claiming salvation because of what he was or what he had done, we can then, by contrast, understand what is meant by salvation by faith, which comes to us through the grace of God.
Would a man not wiser be to go to God pleading his sins and shortcomings in penitence and humbleness, trusting in the love and grace of God?
This is faith, and it is the ultimate ground of a man's salvation after he has done all in his power to make his conduct in harmony with his profession.
