PLATTSMOUTH JOURNAL

"And children's faces looking up Holding wonder like a cup,"

Sara Teasdale's poem kept running through my mind during the services this morning... there could be no truer description of the shining glory in my children's eyes. Wonder, yes—and discovery and complete trust.

Suddenly I realized where I had seen that look before. I was about the age of my own youngsters, sitting beside my mother... just as they were sitting with me now. I remember so well—looking up and seeing that same expression of worship and faith and wonder on my mother's face. And such a deep happiness that I felt I had to reach out to touch her to share in this warmth.

I don't remember that we ever talked together much about religion, my mother and I. I needed only to look at her face to know that I might find her peace and security at the same source that sustained her over the years. The whole family worshipping together every week, with others who believed as we did, was always a very special time. It gave us a closeness we felt very strongly, a strength that helped carry us through the week with hope and courage.

And so at service this morning, I sent up a prayer that my children would see my mother's look on my face... and have it to remember all their years.

Give them a Faith to live by...

Worship with them this week
