European Trip For Two Farmers Who Win Pig-Naming Contest

Two Corn Belt farmers and their wives will vacation in Europe—just for choosing the best name for a pig.

The 21-day, expense paid tour is "tops" in a competition offering over $10,000 in awards to corn raisers who select the best name for a "research pig" chosen by Cargill, Incorporated.

Each award—there are 250 in all—will be made in duplicate with one going to the farmer who suggests the winning name and the other to the farmer-salesman or dealer who serves him with Cargill Hybrid Seed Corn.

"The naming of a 'research pig, a meat-type animal, symbolizes the work being done in national breeding and feeding research programs and gives tribute to these programs," according to H. Ken Hayes, Manager of the company's Hybrid Corn Department.

The name-choosing competition is open to corn raisers in
