Tim Hovey's Like Most Other Boys—Horror Film Addict

Little Tim Hovey, who has to date starred only in light-hearted sentimental comedies, says that his ultimate ambition as an actor is to appear in "the most terrible, horrible, frightening monster picture ever made."

Tim, who co-stars with Maureen O'Hara and John Forsythe in "Everything but the Truth,"

Universal-International romantic comedy in color opening Sun., Mon., and Tues.; April 14-16-18, at the Cass Theatre, told about his partiality to science-fiction films while he was examining, in the U-I special effects department, a working model of a dinosaur that will be used in an upcoming U-I horror film titled "The Land Unknown."

"Boy, this thing is really great," enthused Tim. "I'd love to be in a picture with it! Its eyes roll, its mouth moves, its tongue sticks out and it even has saliva. This'll really scare everybody."
