

Rockets To Face Ralston Sunday

The guy who stymied potent Columbus on four measly bingles recently will be on the mound Sunday when Plattsouth's Rockets clash with league-leading Ralston in Platte Valley League play. The game begins at 2:30 p. m. in Ralston.

Gary Robins, a 19-year-old Offutt Air Force Base hurler by way of California, will pit his slants against Ralston's "Murderers' row," which has accounted for three straight wins.

In his last mound outing against Columbus Robins whiffed 15 batters as his mates pounded seven runs across the platter for a 7-2 victory.

But in Ralston's Bridenbaugh, he will be facing an opponent of no mean caliber. Bridenbaugh hurling every Sunday, has chalked up a perfect 3-0 record on the mound.

Plattsouth, although committing three errors Sunday against Ashland, is beginning to find itself afield, and seems to be progressively becoming tougher.

After a season high of seven errors committed in the loss to Gretna, Rocket defensive players have been tightening their game which has resulted in tight, hardfought diamond battles.

The Rockets, in recent days, have undergone a minor shakeup in the lineup and team officials are hoping the move will result in sending the club more often into victory column.

Plattsouth currently holds a 1-2 record in league play.

ers undertook the building of a traffic bridge to span the Platte river, a barrier to the south-east part of the state from their metropolis, Omaha.

This bridge was completed and opened for traffic in December 1911. It was a gala event with officials from Lincoln and Omaha here for the event, opening the way for surfaced roads to connect with the bridge. This bridge was in operation until the late 20's when the present bridge was built.

One of the great contributions to community welfare was the construction of the Plattsouth dock east of this city which made possible river traffic in future years. The development of this traffic is for the future to decide.

Mr. Pollock was married on December 17, 1890, to Miss Lida Patterson, daughter of pioneer residents, James and Ellen Patterson. To them were born two daughters, Ellen, now Mrs. L. O. Minor of Kankakee, Ill., and Alice, now Mrs. Virgil Perry, of this city, with whom the father resides. There are several grandchildren and great grandchildren to join in the well wishes to the grandfather on this natal day.
