

Among Cucumbers, You Go A Fast Pace, Or Get Left Out

Two's company, three's a crowd.

Especially when you're hangin' round with the other cucumbers on the vine.

George Davis, 5 miles west of Mynard, knows about those things after having raised a double cuke to full size.

The regular pickling cucumbers are about 5 to 6 inches long and joined together by a thin wall. Davis thinks it's a rarity.

Not only that, the twins harbor on one of their sides what looks like another cuke, partially developed but too weak to keep up in fast company.
