Mushroom pleating at the hip-line was detailed with lace and repeated across the waistline of the bouffant skirt which ended in a sweep at the back. A temple cloche of matching lace and taffeta from which fell an elbow length veil of imported bridal illusion was worn. She carried a white Bible marked with a white orchid and ivy leaves.

Nancy Fleming of Lincoln was maid of honor; bridesmaids were Mary Alice Anderson, Oakland and Mrs. Donald Falk, Lincoln.

The three attendants appeared in white silk organza over matching taffeta. A cuffed ledge contoured the neck of an Empire bodice with its butterfly sleeves, while the circularly cut skirt flared to great width at the hem. White lace picture hats completed their costumes, and they carried crescent bouquets of gardenias and carnations accented with ivy leaves.
