Capitol News

MELVIN PAUL
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association LINCOLN — There appears to be more than the normal amount of interest by candidates now in the 1958 elections.

Several candidates have already tossed their proverbial "hats" into the political ring — most of them for the office of state treasurer.

Gov. Victor Anderson became the first to publicly announce as a candidate for the chief executive's chair.

The governor, a Republican, will be bidding for his third term campaigning on an economy and experience theme. This promptly drew comment from Bernard Boye, Democratic National committee member.

Boye said the amount of money being spent by the Republican administration in Nebraska will be a campaign issue in the 1958 political wars.

The governor is not the first to seek a third term. Val Peterson made it as did Dwight Griswold, both Republicans, and R. L. Cochran, a Democrat.

So far, it appeared there would not be major opposition to Gov. Anderson from any Republican candidate who might be a formidable opponent.

On the Democratic ledger, mentioned have been Lawrence Brock, Frank Sorrell and Frank Morrison. Brock, however, is expected to bid for congress in the third district. Sorrell probably would have to be drafted, which leaves Morrison as a likely prospect, or possibly Willard Townsend of Lincoln, State Demo Chairman.

A post card campaign by the Better Nebraska Association, asking signers to have their names removed from petitions urging repeal of the 7th cent of state gasoline tax, has caused considerable stir in government circles.

And it's caused no end of trouble for Secretary of State Frank Marsh's office.

The office, Deputy Roland Luedtke said, doesn't know whether to accept the post cards as legal requests for removal of names, since there is no law covering the subject.

The attorney general's office was asked for an opinion, but there were indications this might not be delivered before Sept. 20 deadline for submitting the petitions themselves.

Some post card signers are using the means to lambast various, unrelated phases of government, praise the gas tax, or oppose it.

Some cards say the signers didn't know there was a petition drive underway. A few are arriving with postage due. Some send them in and say they never signed the petitions.

Some persons are using the cards to request their names be put on the petitions.

The BNA, staunch opponent of the petition drive, sent the cards to 250,000 persons owning motor vehicles.

Luedtke doubts validity of the cards. Other observers say the maneuver is "psychological warfare."

Probably since the number of the petitions coming into the Secretary of State's office is not
