Careless Sportsmen Menace

Hunters are reminded that their rifles or shotguns are lethal weapons capable of killing not only game, but also human beings. The first responsibility of a hunter is to exercise the utmost caution when handling firearms. To fail in this is inexcusable criminal negligence.

Any hunter who endangers human life is not a sportsman, but a public menace. One short second of precaution while hunting may spare the hunter a life time of regrets.

Following the Crowd

Too many of us, and the writer is no exception, tend to follow the crowd and "conform." However, much of the world's progress has been made by men and women who refused to conform when they thought the crowd, or the majority, was wrong.

It is very easy in life to accept gossip about those one has an inclination to be jealous of. It is a common fault for us to try to pull others down to our own level — if they have out-performed us in life in some way.

Moreover, the tendency of too many of us is to belittle things we do not understand, dislike those with whom we disagree and to close our minds to learning after we have reached a certain age in life.

There is usually a high price to pay when one bucks the majority, or when one refuses to follow the crowd. If everyone around us idles away their afternoon, that is no reason why we should idle away ours.

If a certain type of work is frowned upon by the so-called social set, that is no reason why some good, honest sweat should not be expended by any man or woman who puts commonsense ahead of false pride.

It is good for all of us to evaluate our lives and our philosophies and give some thought to standing on our own two feet. It is easy to follow the crowd. But remember the crowd is often wrong.

Information Lacking?

At least two persons at a recent public hearing on sewers here commented that not enough information was available about proposed construction.

Their principal objection was to the fact that amounts of estimated assessments against individual properties were not available.

Nebraska law requires that full description of work to be done be given and a hearing on necessity held. Objection can later be made to assessment at another hearing required by law at the time assessment schedules are ready for council action.

Now, it is always somewhat beside the point to call to mind what is done elsewhere. But in this case it might be informative and be a thought about what might be done in Nebraska if there were demand for it.

In Iowa, law requires that full estimates of all such construction be made. The proposed estimated assessment (in dollars and cents) against each affected property then must be figured, each property owner informed in writing of his proposed assessment and a public hearing held at which objections to construction because of cost (or for other reasons) can be made.

There are complications to this system which should be noted. Engineering costs

Howard's Homespun

Use of the words, "They say," has ruined many lives.

Most anyone can find fault anyway, anywhere, anyhow.

A little authority affects some men more than strong drink.

It is too bad that sincerity is such a rare virtue these days.

Almost any efficiency expert can speed up another man's business.

The world has many people ready to borrow but not quite as many anxious to lend.

An ignorant individual seeks only the facts that bolster his own prejudices.

It takes more than luck to turn an idea into a successful business organization.

The trouble with stock speculation is that you usually either sell too soon or too late.

Laziness is a progressive disease; conversely, work done makes other work easier.

Some people think they become experts on any subject if they read a book about it.

and legal fees are higher.

Too, it sometimes occurs that an outlay of funds for engineering is sacrificed because objections kill the project altogether.

Some Iowa communities have gone to having informal hearings among property owners concerned with recommended projects to get reaction to costs and needs for projects before a penny of money is spent on official action. Some engineering is required of course.

These things may not be possible in Nebraska for some reason beyond the fact that the law now in effect doesn't require them.

However, progress in getting projects accomplished might be faster and certainly the public would feel much better informed and confident if they knew definitely (in dollars and cents) how they were to be affected.

Down Memory Lane

20 YEARS AGO

Boosters for the King Korn Carnival were preparing for a whirlwind auto tour of Cass, Sarpy counties, Omaha, and Fremont counties in Iowa to boost for the King Korn Carnival.
