

$3 000 Ceiling In Soil Bank 'For Each Farm'

LINCOLN—The Soil Bank's 1958 Acreage Reserve Program had a $3,000 limitation on payments applied to each producer with regard to each farm.

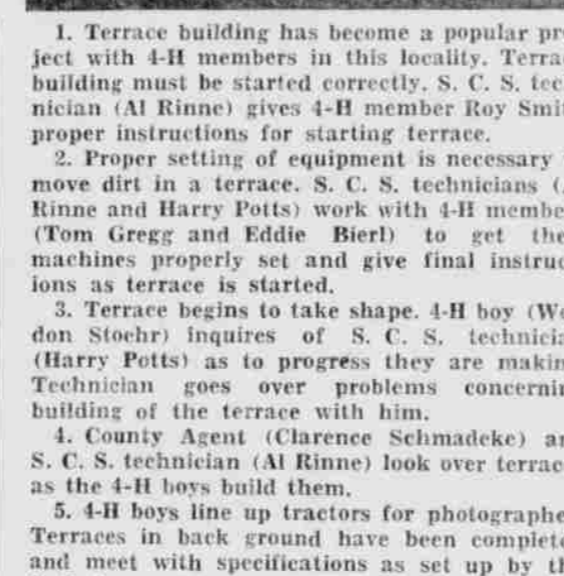

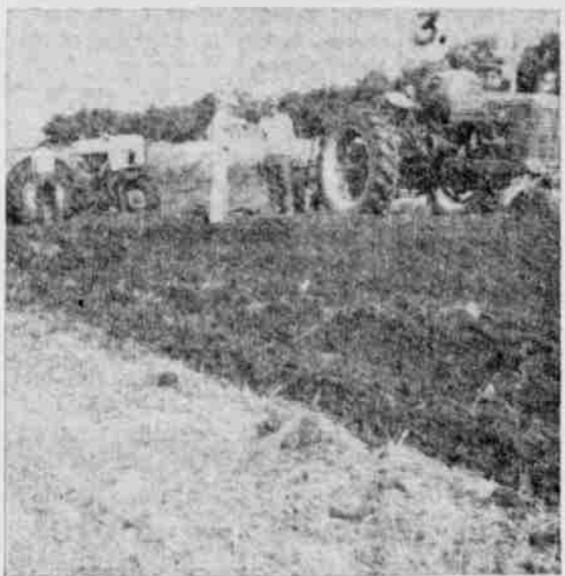

That's the report from Wilfred R. Nelson, chairman of the Nebraska Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

Nelson says the United States Comptroller General's ruling is that Congress considered the $3,000 limitation as applying to each producer regarding a particular farming unit. The limitation is not a ceiling on the amount of compensation that can be paid to him for all farms in which he may have an interest.

Farmers who earned $3,000 under the 1958 winter wheat acreage reserve program on one farm would not be eligible for further payments with respect to 1958 crops on the same farm.

Nelson reminds farmers that the $3,000 limit applies to spring seeded crops on a farm as well as on the farm's 1958 winter wheat crop which is being seeded this fall.

Communist China plans a foreign trade volume for 1957 approximately 91.6 per cent of last year's according to a report of the National Economic Commission.

Terrace Building 'Ordinary Task'

Young farmers in the community recently proved that farmers can still build terraces with ordinary implements found on the farm.

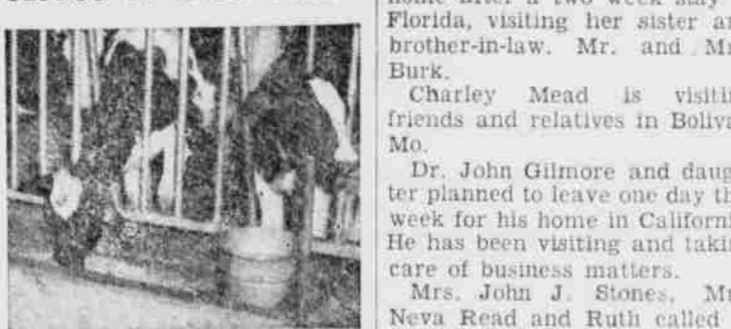

The building of terraces has become a project carried on by 4-H clubs in this area for several years.

The Soil Conservation Service and the County Agriculture Extension Agent met with these 4-Hers for the entire day. The boys are given locations which they work, and instructions as to the procedure they should follow. Most of the boys use moldboard plows, disk plows, whirlwind terracers or disk terracers, that their fathers were using at home. Implement dealers or other interested parties occasionally furnish tractors and plows for these projects.

By the middle of the afternoon the terrace lines have usually been completed to comply with specifications as set up by the Soil Conservation Service. A thorough check is then made of the terraces. Numerous problems in terrace building and maintenance are then discussed.

Fall Is Time To Spread Field Lime

LINCOLN — Lime spreaders should be put to work this fall, advises M. D. Weldon, Extension agronomist at the University of Nebraska.

Farmers will get better legume stands next year and increase efficiency from fertilizers if lime is applied, Weldon says.

A report from the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee says liming acid soil makes more phosphate and nitrogen available for growing crops.

The reports lists these other benefits from liming: lime can furnish calcium and sometimes magnesium for plant growth, it helps make most plants more vigorous, and it favors the increase of beneficial soil bacteria.

Weldon advises having soil tested before adding lime. He says it will take the guess work out of the job and will show how much lime the soil needs.

Adding lime in the fall has these advantages: it gives more time for the job, a firmer footing for machinery and a greater choice of fields to work in. Lime can be put on after soybean or sorghum harvest, after corn is in the crib or on pastures or stubble ground.

Dairy Records Are Important

LINCOLN — Milk and butterfat records should be maintained on dairy cows that freshen this fall, reports C. W. Nibler, Extension dairyman at the University of Nebraska.

Nibler says the Standard Dairy Improvement Association (DHIA) record-keeping system, the owner-sampler record system and the weigh a day a month record plan can be used. The standard DHIA system records production to date monthly and year-to-date herd totals, total and average feed cost, and income over feed cost for the herd. A DHIA supervisor collects the sample. Calculations are made by the supervisor or at the central office.

The owner-sampler method records the butterfat and production per cow. The amount of grain fed each cow and the amount of roughage fed to the herd also may be recorded. The records are calculated in the central office and sent to the farmer.

Milk records for each cow for the month, production date, monthly herd records, and year-to-date herd totals are calculated in the weigh-a-day system. Feed records on the herd also may be included. The total and average feed cost and income over feed cost for the herd for each month and for the year are calculated if feed records are reported.
