Audie Murphy Stars In "Fort Petticoat" As Frontier Fighter

Unforgettable star of "To Hell and Back," Audie Murphy returns to the Cass Theatre screen on Sun. Mon. and Tues., Sept. 22, 23 and 24 in a frontier adventure ideally suited to his abilities as a soldier, a fighting man and an actor. "The Guns of Fort Petticoat," with print by Technicolor, is a hither-to-untold saga of the Southwest, when a single man and a band of women withstood savage Indian attacks in a battle for survival.

According to Hollywood, "The Guns of Fort Petticoat" runs the gamut of danger, as Murphy leads his desperate, beset handful of "soldiers in skirts." Actually of course, they are pioneer women and their children, left defenseless in the savage Texas territory when their menfolk march off to the Civil War.

County Surveyors Have To Register

The Nebraska attorney General ruled Wednesday that under the provision of LB 153, requiring the registration of surveyors, are fully applicable to county surveyors as they are to other surveyors.

The opinion was in response to the request of County Attorney Eugene C. McFadden of Madison County. The opinion was written by Assistant Attorney General Cecil B. Brubaker, said "no exception is made in the act for present county surveyors, and specific mention is made of county surveyors."

The bill passed by the 1957 Legislature requires the registration of all surveyors, a registration fee and posting of a five thousand dollar bond. Only exceptions are surveyors working for the federal governments as assistants to registered surveyors.
