

Trailer Home, Court Law Called 'Void'

An Oct. 1 official opinion from the Attorney General of Nebraska has led to a notice from the chief of the Bureau of Dairies and Foods that "LB 104 is void and unenforceable in its entirety."

The law, also known as the Mobile Homes and Mobile Home Courts Law, was passed by the 1957 legislature. It was to regulate trailer homes and courts.

The bureau chief gave no explanation in his notice to county clerks but Atty. Gen. Gerald Vitmas has been quoted saying that by exempting courts already in existence, the law violates the state constitutional provision which prohibits the passing of any special laws granting to any corporation, association or individual any special or exclusive privileges, immunity or franchise.

The law called for licensing and inspection of trailer courts by the State Agriculture Department and established penalties for violations. A $10 permit for construction, $25 initial license fee to operate a trailer court and $25 annual license fee were provided.

The law however exempted courts established before effective date of the law.

Fire Fund Drive Underway Here

The Plattsmouth Volunteer Fire Department's second annual fund drive is underway, begun last weekend with mailing of letters to all known address-holders in the area.

It will continue as long as persons interested in assuring adequate fire protection for themselves contribute to the voluntary mail solicitation.

Contributions should be addressed to John Svoboda, secretary of the department, in care of the Post Office here. Or, they can be given to Svoboda at the Plattsmouth State Bank or to any other volunteer.

The drive has no established goal. Main project of the department is to pay as much as possible toward a new 750-gallon-per-minute pumper truck the city has ordered. It will be equipped with aerial ladders long needed here for maximum fire protection.

The Volunteer Department at the same time is emphasizing its free inspection service. Any property holder can have his business or residence inspected for fire hazards free of charge by telephoning 5251.

Chief Joe Krutner urges inspection of all heating plants now that the heating season is starting. He warned that moisture may have rusted out chimney flues since the last heating season.

In their letter, the firemen say, in part: "Give what you can, for every contribution, large or small, will help us to achieve our goal—which is to produce adequate equipment for our fire-fighting and life-saving efforts."

"We assure you that every cent you contribute this year will be applied toward payment of this contract (the city's contract to purchase the $16,000 fire truck).

The firemen's letter ends, appropriately with: "We remain yours in time of need."

'Don't Give Fires Place To Start'

The week of Oct. 6-12 has been designated as National Fire Prevention Week.

The 1957 theme, "Don't give fire a place to start", should suggest an action program to farm families all over Nebraska, an extension specialist in safety at the University of Nebraska says.

By eliminating all fire hazards from homes, buildings, and land before the winter heating season many serious fires can be prevented.

The following safety precautions can be applied by all farm families:

1. Clean up all trash, weeds and lumber around buildings and the farmstead. They might provide the fuel for a serious fire.

2. Have the electrical system checked for overloaded circuits and damaged or inadequate wiring.

3. Make a thorough check of the heating system, including heaters, chimneys, flues, and fuel supply lines to see that they are in good repair.

4. Observe the "No Smoking" rule in barns, machine shops, and other places where fires are easily started.

5. Plan with the family procedures to be followed in the event that you do have a fire on the farm or in the home. A well-developed plan may save a life.

The time to act to prevent fires is before they happen. Make a check of your place now. Don't Give Fires a Place to Start.

Deadline Is Oct. 15 for Feed Wheat

Farmers must sign up by Oct. 15 if they want to take part in the recently enacted 30-acre feed-wheat exemption program, states Wilfred R. Nelson, chairman of the Nebraska Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee.

Legislature authorizing the program permits a farmer with a wheat acreage allotment of less than 30 acres to grow up to 30 acres of wheat for use exclusively on the farm where produced and still not be liable for marketing quota penalties. To be eligible to grow up to 30 acres of wheat without penalty, a farmer must sign an application showing the intended use of the wheat. This must be done before the 1958 crop planting time on the farm on Oct. 15, 1957, whichever is later.

Any producer who begins seeding his 1958 wheat crop after October 15, 1957, and who has not signed an application will not be eligible for this exemption. However, the farmer would be eligible to sign the application up until the time he begins seeding his wheat. The Applications must be approved by county ASC offices.

Any producer who takes part in the feed-wheat exemption provision will not be eligible to sell, barter, or exchange any of his wheat, nor will it be eligible for price support, the entire crop of wheat must be used on the farm where produced for seed, human food, or livestock and poultry feed.

Safe Hunting, Best Hunting Are the Same

LINCOLN — Every hunter should be reminded that "Hunting the Safe Way is Hunting the Right Way", says William D. Lutes, Extension specialist in safety at the University of Nebraska.

Hunting accidents kill and injure thousands of sportsmen every year, but a little care in most cases could have prevented the accidents.

These precautions should be on the mind of every individual handling a gun:

1. Be careful when cleaning or oiling the gun in preparation for the hunting season.

2. Never leave a gun hanging in the home with cartridges in the chamber or in the magazine.

3. Never point a gun at anything unless you intend to shoot. Foolish play and scuffling are dangerous.

4. Treat every gun as a loaded gun.

5. Do not carry a loaded gun in the auto or on farm machinery.

6. Never leave a loaded gun unattended.

7. Never shoot toward livestock, buildings or the highway.

8. Observe hunting signs. Keep farmers as your friends. Ask for hunting permission.

9. Do not mix gunpower and alcohol.

10. Do not spoil your hunting trip with hazardous traffic practices.

Make your hunting "Good Hunting" by following safe practices.
