Louisville High Class Surveys Racial Feeling

LOUISVILLE—Galen Dodge and his Louisville High Modern survey on the racial problem. The question asked was, "How do you feel about the racial riots in the South?"

Twenty-four students each asked three adults this afternoon this question. Everyone contacted recognized the situation as a real problem. The answers ranged from "send them back to Africa" to have just as many rights as anyone else."

A few of the answers are as follows: "They should have a school of their own with their own kind teaching them." "If the newspapers hadn't made such an issue of the integration things would be alright."

This segregation trouble is an utter disgrace to the American way of life and democracy." "The negroes have just as much right to go to school as the Mexicans, Chinese, and the rest of the races with colored skin."

"They have as many rights as anyone else, but I don't believe in the intermarriage."
