Youth Taken to Hospital after Reported Fight

An alleged fight which sent one of the two 17-year-old principals to the hospital was being investigated by Cass County Sheriff Tom Solomon today.

The reported fight took place about 11 p.m. Friday a half-mile east of Brown Airport on a county road east of Weeping Water.

Omer Voyles of Avoca was reported in good condition at a Lincoln hospital today after being rushed there after the incident.

James Lee Sherman, Weeping Water, told Solomon in a signed statement that he and Voyles, and two other young men were riding about Friday night and went to the home of relatives east of Weeping Water.

Sherman said Voyles used some abusive language against him and one of the other young men and the four left the farm home when the occupant warned against any trouble there.

Near the airport, Sherman said, the car was stopped and the boys got out. A fight ensued between Sherman and Voyles, Sherman said, lasting about 15 minutes.

Afterward, Voyles complained of a stomach injury and was taken to Weeping Water by the boys. He was taken, unconscious, to a doctor's office and rushed by ambulance to the hospital.

Cold Needed for Skating Rink

Cold weather is the only ingredient still needed to provide Plattsmouth ice skaters with a rink.

The City Street Department last week completed preparing a rink site on the Presbyterian Church property south on Chicago Avenue where a rink has been flooded for several winters.

The Fire Department will flood the rink as soon as there's enough cold weather to afford a frost base.

The Pollocks formerly provided the rink site until the land was given to the church. This year, the church agreed that the city was to keep weeds mowed there the past summer in return for use of the rink this winter.

It is expected the church will begin building there before another skating season arrives.

January 2 Is Earliest Entry In Baby Contest

Arctic breezes from the Polar region may or may not have slowed Mr. Stork's flight to Cass country over the New Year holiday. Maybe the long legged bird delivery bird thought that the weather was too cold in this area and sped to warmer climes.

In any event, the Journal has received two entries in the 1958 Baby Derby. The earliest arrival to date was on January 2nd. The contest editor is awaiting challenge of that date before making an announcement of the winner.

If Mr. Stork did make an earlier visit in Cass county than the January 2nd date, he urges the recipients of the visit to advise the Journal at once.

Union School District Would Join Neb. City

This evening the patrons of five of the school districts at Union are meeting with the board of education of Nebraska City to secure information regarding the circulation of petitions and legal steps necessary to have the districts transferred to Otoe county.

President George Stone of the Union board of education states that the districts seeking change are 10, 11, 12, 13, and 17.

Meeting was held Friday at Union attended by sixty patrons to discuss the matter.

Under the proposed changes Union would be an attendance center for kindergarten through sixth or eighth grade. All high school students would attend Nebraska City Senior high school.

The elementary school would be under the supervision of the Nebraska City board of education. Five or six teachers would be in the school.

Buses to transport elementary pupils from the four rural districts into the Union attendance center would be provided by the Nebraska City school district.

Buses to transport high school students to Nebraska City would also be provided by the school district.

Miss Laura Meisinger returned home Thursday after spending the holiday in Denver with relatives and friends.

Nebraska School Pay Shows Rise

The average salary of Nebraska in all areas of public school education is higher than last year, with the exception of junior high school principals.

The 1957-58 salary study prepared by the Nebraska State Education Association shows that the trend of past years continued this year: salaries are going up steadily but very slightly each year.

The current salary report leads to the same conclusion drawn each of the past several years. Nebraska teachers' salaries are lagging behind those of people in other occupations and behind salaries of teachers in other states.

The one area showing a decrease in average salary from last year is that of junior high school principals. Largest percentage of salary increase over last year is for assistants to county superintendents.

Salaries of classroom teachers (these do not include administrators such as principals and superintendents) range from more than $6,500 to as low as $1,530 a year.

The survey shows salaries are generally higher for teachers and administrators in the larger school systems and lower in Class I districts (districts maintaining only the elementary grades).

Lowest annual salary reported — $1,530 — was to a teacher in a Class I school. Class I teachers in schools with three or fewer teachers receive the highest average salary in Cheyenne County ($3,244) and lowest average salary in Adams County ($1,823). Overall average is $2,452, up 2.4 per cent over last year.

That average is based on salaries ranging from $4,275 to $1,530.

Average salary of county superintendents is $3,233, up only .5 per cent. County superintendents' salaries range from more than $7,500 to $2,000.
