Down Memory Lane

Billboards and Highways

The American Automobile Association is pushing hard for congressional action which would result in bans against advertising billboards along the nation's super-highways — now under construction.

Because the rights of states are involved, the A. A. A. and other groups favor federal action which would reward the states, financially, if they would ban unsightly billboards from the sides of the super-highways. This is a subject which becomes confused in the minds of the public.

Responsible outdoor advertisers, like the Outdoor Advertising Association of America, do not oppose the goals of the A. A. A. or others who support natural beauty along our highways. It is not, in fact, the fault of the many reputable outdoor advertisers that so many of our highways are over-cluttered and over-commercialized, and, in fact, unsightly.

The O. A. A. favors natural beauty as scenery along the nation's super-highways. Where they approve advertising, they believe in substantial attractive billboards, built at proper distances from the road, and separated by long distances along the highway.

We must remember that our advertising is a big business in the United States. No one would wish to cut the throats of all those engaged in this business, and it seems that the O. A. A. is taking a reasonable approach to the solution — in admitting that there will be certain highways where advertising can be banned, and — in addition — supporting controlled and properly spaced and properly maintained billboards along the roadways where advertising is permitted.

Therefore, we would support enactment of a measure which would reward the states for maintaining the natural beauty along the nation's super-highways. On the other hand, we think that near cities some advertising may actually be desirable, if limited and if carefully controlled, and also wish to point out that legislation enacted should not serve to work a hardship or misfortune on the outdoor advertising industry as we know it today.

Sheriff Homer Sylvester and Deputy Sheriff Cass Sylvester returned from Childress, Texas, where they secured Earl Freeman wanted here on a forgery charge. He was wanted here on a charge of the matter of a $250 check cashed at the Home Dairy where he had represented himself as representing a beer distributing company. He had worked the bad check deal in Lincoln and several other places — Charles C. Parmele, 74, died at the Paul Wohlfarth home where he has been staying since leaving the hospital in Lincoln. Mr. Parmele was one of the leading bankers of Nebraska for many years and instrumental in financing many of the farmers and business firms in this portion of Cass county. His family were pioneers of Cass county — Fred H. Gorder died at his home in Weeping Water at the age of 73 years. Mr. Gorder was an outstanding figure in the county. He was first elected county commissioner from the third district in 1919 and resigned a few months before his death due to ill health — William T. She was a graduate of the class of 1936 of the Plattsmouth schools.

30 YEARS AGO

This section of Nebraska was visited by a very heavy snowstorm on April 9th that did much damage to the telephone, telegraph and electric lines in this area. Every lineman was called out to help battle the storm. Lines were down for several days. In many cases the poles were down as well as the wires. Manager Fred Rea of the Iowa-Nebraska Co., was without sleep for several nights. The funeral of Mrs. Martha Murray, mother of Mrs. Bert Reed, was delayed by condition of the roads between this city and Elmwood. The funeral scheduled for Friday was delayed until Monday — Much of the fruit in this section was badly damaged by the intense cold of the past several days — Leslie A. Gansmer of west of Murray had his car damaged when struck by a large car driven by an Omaha man.

Get in Swing
And Clean Up
With Spring

Springtime is nature's clean up time and William D. Lutes, Extension safety specialist at the University of Nebraska, suggests farm families pitch in and assist nature this year.

He suggests helping nature by cleaning up around the farm and in the farm home.

"Give the farm a new look, and make it a safer and easier place to live and work," says Lutes.

This can be done by picking up broken glass, rusty tin cans and loose boards with nails in them.

"Get rid of the trash that's accumulated all year and clean up that old lumber piled back of the barn," Lutes continues.

"Give the farm shop a good house cleaning too; put tools in neat order and assign a place for every tool. In short, keep everything in place."

It's also a good idea to inspect broken and worn steps and stairs for needed repairs.

Then spread a little paint to brighten up the place, trim the shrubbery and plant some flowers.
