The Private College

The private colleges in this country, most of them small, have been struggling in recent years to keep their heads above water. There are isolated examples, of course, where private colleges are richly endowed, and where money is no problem. On the other hand, for the majority of them, the economic battle is their most difficult one.

One thing many people do not understand is the fact that private colleges save them tax money. For example, if all college students went to state universities, the load on these universities would be far greater than it is today.

It is a known fact that it costs so much per student at state universities, and if the student load were increased tremendously, as it would be if students in private colleges were to go to state universities en masse, then the taxpayer would have to finance the added cost. As it is, various private groups, churches, etc., finance the salaries of the staff, and all other expenses of the private college, which does not receive any tax money from that state whatsoever.

And, when one realizes that most of the country's Presidents, and most of the top leaders of industry, are graduates of small, liberal arts colleges — despite the fact that a greater number of students are graduated from state universities — one can appreciate the contribution of these small colleges in our scheme of education in the United States.

Down Memory Lane

20 YEARS AGO
Zooming from out of the southwest James L. Hurst, brought his monoplane to rest in the hay meadow at the Stull farm north of this city, to make completion of the first airmail pickup from the local postoffice — For six hours eight grade boys from the junior high school had charge of the city government, particularly of the police department, where four boys, George Rhoden, Fredrick Jasper, Edwin Smally and Gerald Blunt, donned badges and went forth to hunt out offender. The members of the boy police force at the city jail got locked in and Chief Barclay refused to release them and they remained in the lockup until "Mayor" Donald Martin arrived to order their release. Coach Clark Boggess was in charge of the program - Alvo high school had their graduation for 1938 with nine in the class, Grace Muenchau, Ruby Muenchau, Ruth Ann Ganz, Margaret Jean Stroemer, Iona Weichel, Anna Lee Lancaster, Doretta Rueter, Gerald Petersen, Kenneth Keller. Commencement address was by Governor Roy L. Cochran. Chairman of the board, Ben Muenchau, presented the diploma — Plattsmouth enjoyed a total eclipse of the moon which was viewed by many who stayed up for the event or were out until the wee hours of the morning.

30 YEARS AGO
In the opening game of the new state baseball league Hans Newman of this city was playing shortstop for North Platte, securing two putouts, four assists and without an error. North Platte won 8 to 4 over York — Plattsmouth high school was named as a member of the national honor society and a local chapter established with seven members, George Olson, Fern Jahrig, Henry Woster, Ralph Olson, Eula Reed, Marie Nolting and Florence Wiles — Bud of Promise lodge Rebekahs held their election of officers, selecting Miss Jessie Robertson as noble grand; Miss Helen Johnson, vice-grand; Miss Marie Kaufmann, secretary, Mrs. Fred Mumm, treasurer. A class of seven candidates were initiated into the order, Mrs. Kate Oliver Morgan, Miss Betty West, Miss Estelle Geis, Miss Gertrude Morgan, Miss Dora McNurlin, Mrs. Henry Ofe, Mrs. Anna Hesse — Miss Fern Jahrig and George Olson have been selected as valedictorian and salutatorian for the graduation exercises of the class of 1938 — A representative of the Hungarian government was here from Omaha to look after the matter of the estate of John Uszoviz, who committed a double murder and killed himself in this city. The deceased left a son in Hungary and it was in his interest that the consul was here — Since the stealing of his Ford car a few days ago, Rudy Iverson, the big collar and tie man at C. E. Wescott's Sons, has been walking. Yesterday the information was received that the roadster had been found in St. Joseph, Mo., where it was abandoned on May 17th. Rudy is going to St. Joe and if the car is in running order will drive it back.

Capitol News

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Assn.
LINCOLN — The windup of the school year has put education and plans of youngsters in the spotlight.

The State Education Department took a look at the situation and came up with some interesting observations:

Twenty-one per cent of Nebraska high school students still are completely unprotected against polio.

Forty-four per cent of the graduates of the 1956-57 year enrolled in some educational work beyond the high school level.

In June, the State Board of Education will be presented with a request for higher teacher standards for accreditation of Nebraska high schools.

Let's look at the polio problem first. State Education Commissioner F. B. Decker said a survey of high school students has shown 63 per cent have completed all three Salk polio shots, 79 per cent have started their shots, but 21 per cent are unprotected.

Decker said the status of polio protection for the scholars has improved the past 12 months but the record is still far short of perfect.

A year ago, a similar survey showed 67 per cent of the students had at least one shot while 28 per cent had completed the series.

At the elementary level, Decker said 77 per cent of the children have completed all three shots while 11 per cent have no protection. There was sharp variance by community. In some areas, the commissioner reported, as many as 50 per cent of the students had received no polio immunization at all, while in others every child had the full series completed.

A. R. Lichtenberger, department research chief, looked into the matter of higher education of last year's high school graduates.

He surveyed 450 high schools, and got replies from 366 involving 11,075 students. The study showed 44 per cent have enrolled in a program of higher education.

Of the total seeking higher education, 28 per cent signed for college or university courses, not quite one per cent in summer school and 7.7 per cent in colleges and universities outside Nebraska.

Slightly over 5 per cent of the graduates headed for commercial school courses, and 1.5 per cent took up nursing.

On the accreditation matter, the state committee that handles such problems will recommend to the State Board of Education in June that teacher standards be hiked before a school is accredited.

This, according to Dr. Floyd Miller, assistant commissioner of education, means some schools will be boosted higher on the accreditation ladders, some lowered and some removed from the ratings.

There are four grades of ratings. The highest is double-A, next is A, and third is minor accreditation. Approved schools rank below that.

When a school is removed from the approved category, it cannot collect money from the state free tuition levy, paid by citizens for education rural students in high schools.

Factors figuring in rating a school by the state board include staff, administration, plant and facilities and program offered.

The committee will recommend high school teachers have a minimum of 18 hours in professional education and not less than 18—instead of 15—hours in the field in which they teach.

State Spending
Nebraska has spent $100.3 million since July 1 of last year in operating its state government.

There still is $67.4 million in the treasury. The expenditures are primarily federal funds and from cash receipts received by each agency.

For instance, in an average month, when $8.7 million is spent, cash funds would account for about $3.4 million, property tax supported general fund $2.9 million and the remainder federal money.

Since the biennium began, the state has gone through $34.3 million in federal money, $32.2 in cash funds and only $26.3 in general fund receipts.

Hard Tack
Gov. Victor Anderson has served notice on all state spending agencies that a hard tack budget again is in the planning stage.

The tip-off came when the forms for agencies making budget requests were changed. Instead of just being one figure as in the past, there will be a breakdown.

One figure will show how much money will be needed in 1959-61 to continue operations at the current level. The other will show the expansion planned.

It's a bet that the budget form itself will help hold down planned expansion.

The new form also will make it easier for the governor and the legislature's budget committee to make changes in requests of state agencies.

Political Wars
The battle of the ballot boxes, to be decided this November, will get going in earnest soon.

An analysis of the voting in the primary showed Republicans collected 66 per cent of the estimated total vote, compared with 61 per cent two years ago. Democrats, of course, got 34 per cent, as against 39 per cent in 1956.

Political experts said this indicates the GOP has a stronger hold than ever on Nebraska politics, dominated by the Republicans in Nebraska for 18 years.

Democrats say they are working on a reorganization plan that will make its mark this fall. GOP leaders contend they are shoring up their strong organization which will be more difficult than ever to beat in the fall.

WELL BITE: WHY?
Why is that, although as far back as anybody can remember, farmers always have been losing money, yet it is rare that a farmer is seen in a bankruptcy court or in the poorhouse? — Cincinnati Enquirer.

In Appreciation
I am grateful to the people of Cass County for the fine support I received in the May 13th Primary.
It is a great satisfaction to receive the approval of one's home county. I thank you.
